Last of Czech Elections Revives Crisis

NAZI MARGIN AT POLLS ADDS FUEL TO FIRE

Czechs Concerned as Debate Begins Over Questions of Minority Rights.

9 HURT IN PARADE CLASH

Sudetens Celebrate as They Poll 90.9 Per Cent of Vote in German Districts.

(By Associated Press)

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia—With the overwhelmingly pro-Nazi attitude of its 3,500,000 Sudetan Germans clearly demonstrated at the polls, this 20-year-old republic today approached what may be the most momentous decision since its foundation.

Czechoslovaks were not surprised when Konrad Henlein's Nazi-supported Sudeten German party polled an estimated 90 9 per cent of the total vote in German districts yesterday in the third of three Sundays of municipal elections

Discussions Open.

They were more concerned with the outcome of discussions on the troublesome minorities question which will start tomorrow between the government and the Sudeten German party, in a triumphant mood as a result of the elections

Yesterday's elections passed quietly, the only serious disorder being at Maerisch-Schoenberg where five policemen and nine Henleinists were injured when police dispersed a victory parade celebrating a big Sudeten vote.

In Czech regions pro-government parties gained substantial majorities, which were intepreted as a vote of confidence in Premier Milan Hodza's government.

Anxious to demonstrate to France, Great Britain and Czechoslovakia's other friends abroad that the government is willing to make concessions in the cause of peace, Hodza is preparing to hand to Henlein's representatives tomorrow precise proposals designed to satisfy at least some of the Sudeten German demands for more self government in Sudeten districts.

Still Vital Question.

Whether the Henleinists will be content with mere concessions, however, remained a vital question. Another question causing

Dangerous Dispute Ahead For Czechs, Writer Predicts

(Editor's Note: Told by Sudeten leaders that the differences between Czechoslovakia and Germany must result in war and the dismemberment of Czechoslovakia, H. R. Knickerbocker today returned to Prague from a tour of the Sudeten areas on election day. Now that the elections are out of the way he predicts a dangerous tug-of-war over the issue of Sudeten self-rule.)

PARGUE—Europe today enters upon a new and more dangerous phase of the Czech-German conflict.

This country yesterday completed its third and last of a series of municipal elections with a perfect record of public order marred by fewer disturbances than are customary even in local political contests in America.

Now begins a period of acute hostilities between the government and Hitler's and Henlein's Germans, who have emerged from the balloting with approximately 90 per cent of all the German votes.

Elated by success, they are today preparing to push their demands for autonomy to the limit, which the Czech government cannot accept; and this week may bring nearer the final ultimatum for the plebiscite which the Henlein Germans hope will make them citizens for the reich.

What this means for Europe can best be understood by conversation with Henlein leaders in their own territory, away from the soft-spoken subterfuges of their Prague headquarters.

The speech of Rudolf Hess, deputy Nazi leader, in which he declared it was false that Germany ever contemplated attack-

Driver Faces Death Charge After Crash

Manslaughter Accusation to Be Placed Against Mansfield Youth.

Richard Strohminger, 18, of 202 Newman street, driver of an automobile which Saturday struck another car head-on while attempting to pass a truck on Lexington avenue near the city limits, resulting in the death of one woman and injury to three other persons, today faced charges of first degree manslaughter filed in municipal court.

His two companions, with whom, police said, Strohminger fled the scene of the accident were held in jail for investigation. They were arrested near the scene of the accident. Strohminger was arrested at police headquarters when his parents had brought him to the station four hours after the crash.

The woman who died of a fractured skull in the General hospital, three hours after the collision was Miss Ada Kovachy, 48, of Cleveland, Cuyahoga county juvenile probation officer and sister of Municipal Judge Julius M. Kovachy.

Three Sisters Hurt.

The injured, reported in "fair" condition in the hospital are the dead woman's three sisters, Miss Mary M. Kovachy, 55, Miss Helen M. Kovachy, 45, and Mrs. Charlotte Turk, 52, all of Cleveland. Also treated for minor injuries was Edward Turk, 25, Mrs. Turk's son.

The manslaughter charge against Strohminger was drawn by Assistant Richland county Prosecutor Harold T. Lutz and was signed by Lieut. Bruce Friday, who investigated the accident.

Conviction carries a sentence of one to 20 years in the penitentiary.

The Cleveland party, driven by Mrs. Turk, was en route to Delaware for commencement exercises of Ohio Welesyan university,

$4,600 SHORT

Tag Day Adds Only $319 to Community Fund.

Mansfield's 1939 Community Fund drive officially ended Saturday night with a deficit of approximately $4,600, despite a week's emergency drive and Tag day staged Saturday.

Tag day Saturday netted only $319, far short of the $1,000 workers had sought. The entire amount raised during the emergency drive last week, including Tag day, was $1,377, though several reports are yet to come in.

Sidney L. Palmer, executive secretary of the Community Fund, said today a meeting would probably be held this week to discuss the deficit.

The campaign sought to raise $53,950 to maintain ten welfare and charitable agencies for another year, but the total Saturday night was $49,327.

Bodies of Mansfielders Found In Plane Wreck

J. Tracy Dirlam

Mary Lou Dirlam

High up on a California mountain side, the wreckage of a missing TWA liner was found late yesterday, and in it the bodies of eight of the plane's nine passengers—two of whom were J. Tracy Dirlam and his sister, Mary Lou, both of Mansfield. The two young Mansfielders had boarded the plane March 1 at Fresno, Cal.—they were both students at Leland Stanford university—to hurry home to be at the bedside of their dying father, Jay N. Dirlam. Shortly after the plane took off, it crashed into rugged Buena Vista peak, in Yosemite National park. Despite untiring search, the plane was not found until a lone prospector, playing a "hunch" discovered it yesterday. The picture at the bottom shows the plane, a huge "luxury liner."

Settle One of City Relief Problems, Tackle Another

Officials Agree to Shift Office Rental to City; Confer on Temporary Financing Plan.

One relief problem was settled and another was to be taken under consideration today by city and county officials as the county's subdivisions sought means of financing their relief burdens until the end of the year.

Richland county commissioners agreed at a conference this morning to continue as custodians of the relief office at 28 Orange street, but they shifted the $70-a-month rental charge to the city of Mansfield and the townships with the heaviest relief burdens.

C. of C. to Propose Plan.

Meanwhile, a Chamber of Commerce committee was to meet with Mayor C. M. Hunter at 4 p. m. today to propose a temporary plan for providing relief funds in the event that the city fails to obtain a $50,000 transfer from its sinking fund.

The request for a transfer, now under consideration in common pleas court, is due for action this week and, if approved, would help the city to finance its relief cases until the end of the year, officials said. A proposed two-mill tax levy would supply funds next year.

Scheduled to meet with Mayor Hunter at his office this afternoon were Paul W. Williams, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, and A. E. Courtney, chairman of the organization's tax and public finance committee.

FLEES BULLETS

Woman, With 3 Convicts in Car, Defies Fire by Guards.

SUGAR LAND, Tex. —(U.P.)— A woman who drove an automobile through a barrage of rifle bullets aided three convicts who escaped from the Harlem state prison farm today.

Capt. A. N. Owens, farm manager, led a search. Highways were blocked and back roads watched, but the girl apparently had reached a hideaway.

The woman was at the wheel of a parked car when the prisoners, employed on a farm, were marched out of their quarters shortly after daybreak. The three men broke from the ranks and ran to the car. Guards fired but the men reached the car.

LIQUOR PRICES GO UP JULY 1

Federal Gallonage Tax Blamed for Increase at Stores.

After July 1, patrons of the liquor stores in Mansfield—and all over Ohio, for that matter—are going to find their favorite brands a little more expensive.

Announcement was made today of a flat increase of four cents on pints and eight cents on quarts, to take effect the first of next month.

The state liquor department explained that the increase was made necessary, in part, by the recently voted federal tax of 25 cents a gallon on liquor.

STARTS KIDNAP INQUIRY TODAY

Florida Grand Jury Convenes In Cash Boy's Murder; G-Men In New Levine Probe.

(By United Press)

MIAMI, Fla.—A grand jury was called today to indict Franklin Pierce McCall, confessed kidnaper and killer of five-year-old Jimmy Cash. The prosecutor believed that McCall might plead guilty at once and accept his sentence without a jury trial or a lawyer's advice.

J. Edgar Hoover, head of the federal bureau of investigation, who was waiting to testify before the grand jury, said that as soon as his work here was completed he would return north to concentrate on the Peter Levine kidnaping case at New Rochelle, N. Y.

Hoover said he had kept in "close touch with the Levine case," while directing a force of 62 G-men in the search for the Cash child and his kidnaper, and that he was returning to the Levine case as soon as possible.

He had not decided where that work would take him to Washington or New York. The 12-year-old New Rochelle boy disappeared Feb. 24 while on his way home from school and his headless body was washed ashore on Long Island Sound two weeks ago.

Hoover said his future activities would be guided by "developments" in the Levine case, but he did not say whether there had been any developments that he considered important.

DEFY RULING

Candy Retailers to Be Told Not to Collect Sales Tax.

CLEVELAND—(AP)—W. M. Hinson, secretary of Associated Candies, Inc., said today that the candy industry would advise retailers not to collect the state three per cent sales tax on candy.

Sloan Flays Wage Bill, Sees Auto Industry at 1932 Level

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK — Sharply critical of pending wage-hour legislation, Alfred P. Sloan, jr., chairman of the General Motors corporation, predicted today automobile production next year would drop to the 1932 level—low point of the last depression—if the present trend continued.

In a letter accompanying quarterly dividend checks to 375,000 stockholders, he declared:

"The so-called 'recession' has become, in fact, a 'depression.'

"The national economy has become unstabilized due to too rapid an increase in wages and too rapid a shortening of hours in many key industries—purchasing power has thus become unbalanced in relation to prices."

Sloan asserted passage of the wage-hour bill by congress would set one section of the nation against another, work undue hardship on small business units, create further unemployment and thus "penalize the very group it is supposed to help."

Because of the gloomy outlook, he added, "it is difficult to see how the automotive industry in the immediate future can contribute anything to the national economy by way of increasing employment . . ."

The General Motors quarterly dividend was 25 cents a common share, compared to $1 a share distributed in June a year ago.

HUNCH LEADS TO LOST SHIP NEAR MOUNTAIN PEAK

Lone Searcher Discovers Airliner On Which Two Mansfielders Lost Lives March 1; Mother Waits At Fresno For Return of Salvage Crews.

Salvage crews slowly made their way from Wawona, Cal., up the side of Buena Vista peak, in Yosemite National park today—their goal the wreckage of the long lost TWA airliner in which two Mansfielders, J. Tracy Dirlam, 22, and his sister, Mary Lou, 19, lost their lives.

The wreckage of the plane was found late yesterday by H. O. Collier, 23, of Fresno, Cal., a lone searcher, who was working on a "hunch" that the plane had crashed in the vicinity of Buena Vista.

His hunch proved correct—he found, first, bits of the plane, then the plane itself, and in and near it, bodies of the eight of nine persons who had been aboard.

Today, Mrs. Rachel T. Dirlam, widowed mother of the two Mansfielders, was on her way from Laguna Beach to Fresno, to await the arrival there of the bodies of her children, killed on March 1 as they flew homeward to be at the bedside of their father, Jay N. Dirlam, who died without ever learning of the tragic fate of his children.

News dispatches to The News-Journal today said that Collier had reached the wreckage strewn over the snow covered ground 200 feet below the summit of the 9,900-foot mountain. Finding eight bodies, he believed the ninth was near. The wreckage had been deeply embedded in snow, but was uncovered when he found it, dispatches said.

Brings Back Evidence.

Collier brought a brief case from the wreckage, bearing the name of H. M. Salisbury, first officer for TWA, to prove that he had found the long-sought plane.

A salvage crew and airline officials and federal air investigators left Wawona at daylight today, but it was problematical as to when they might reach the wreckage. It took Collier, an experienced climber, eight hours to make the steep climb afoot, and the crews started out on horseback.

Mrs. Dirlam, who left Mansfield for Fresno on March 9 with her father, Rufus A. Tracy, Park avenue west, had gone to Laguna Beach for a few days and was notified by telephone that the plane had been found. She left immediately for Fresno where she was to meet her brother, Rufus Tracy, jr., of Salt Lake City, Utah, who left his home at the same time. The elder Mr. Tracy, grandfather of the Dirlam children, returned to Mansfield several weeks ago.

Bodies to Be Returned.

In a telephone conversation with her parents at 4 a. m. today, Mrs. Dirlam said that as soon as officials released the bodies she and her brother would start for home with them.

Tracy and Mary Lou, both popular members of Mansfield's younger group, took the ill-fated plane at San Francisco airport early in the evening of March 1, rushing home to the bedside of their father who was seriously ill He died several days later and was buried on Tuesday, March 8. Mrs. Dirlam and her father left for California the following day.

The plane was last heard from at 9.28 p. m. on March 1, when the pilot, Capt. John Graves, radioed that he was turning back because of a terrific snow storm that was sweeping the mountainous country. Scattered residents in the region of Bass lake reported hearing the motor about that time and a sound of a crash a short time later.

Plane In Pieces.

The entire country in the region of the Tehachapi mountains and San Joaquim valley, and around Bass Lake was combed by searchers afoot and in planes.

Collier said that he believed the reason the plane hadn't been sighted was because it had been reduced to a mass of small pieces in the crash against the mountainside and probably had been covered by snow within a short time.

Buena Vista peak is in the southwestern corner of Yosemite National park, about 17 miles north of Bass lake in the eastern part of California.

The bodies, Collier said, were badly decomposed and mangled beyond recognition.

Collier, a weigher for a packing company at Fresno, went on his vacation a week ago and had determined to spend the time looking for the plane. He had studied maps of the terrain and was familiar with the country as he was formerly a member of a CCC unit in that district.

Trees Sheared Off.

As he approached the towering peak he found bits of splintered wood which he believed were parts of the plane and two pine trees

Youth Who Found Lost Plane Tells Own Story of Discovery

(EDITOR'S NOTE: In the following graphic story told to an International News Service reporter, 23-year-old H. O. Collier, of Fresno tells how he found the wrecked TWA airliner, with the bodies of two Mansfield passengers and seven other persons.

* * * * *

By H. O. COLLIER
(As Told to International News Service)

YOSEMITE, Cal.—I had a hunch the TWA plane had crashed on that high ridge of mountains south of Yosemite valley, and that turned out to be just where it was.

I had planned to take a prospecting trip in the mountains about this time, but the snow was too heavy for prospecting. I decided to take the trip anyway and hunt for the plane, because I thought the melting snow should have uncovered it by now. I wasn't thinking of the reward I just wanted to see if I could solve the mystery of its disappearance.

The plane was last heard over Bass lake, so I headed for the mountains about 17 miles north of the lake. I left Fresno last Tuesday with a pack on my back, hiked to Yosemite valley, and struck out from there

I had bad luck. I fell into Illilouette creek and was almost drowned. I lost my shoes and socks. I hiked back to Yosemite in my bare feet and got new shoes. Then I started out again, up the old Nevada Falls trail, and cut back south of Glacier point

Early Sunday morning I circled around to the south side of the peak and started up. As I scrambled over a boulder near the top, I saw the wreckage, scattered in the rocks and snow.

It was horrible. The plane must have struck the mountain at full speed, with terrific force. Hundreds of pieces of wreckage were strewn over the mountainside.

It was easy to see why the search planes, which had circled this area hundreds of times, had failed to spot the wreckage. They were looking for something that looked like a plane—but the wreck must have looked from the air like nothing more than scattered rocks.

The pilot had almost cleared the peak—he had struck about two hundred feet from the summit.

I climbed among the wreckage. Bodies were scattered right and left, hurled from the plane by the impact. There was no sign that the wreck had burned.

I counted eight or nine bodies. They were unrecognizable, in pretty bad condition from the wreck and the long exposure.

Everyone must have died instantly.

I picked up the uniform cap of one of the pilots, and a brief case stamped with the name of H. M. Salisbury, one of the passengers, to take back as evidence that I had found the wreck.

I hiked back to Yosemite valley as fast as I could. I reached there late Sunday night and reported to the ranger station.

Floods, Surpassing War Horrors, Grip Central China

DYKES BROKEN, YELLOW RIVER PERILS TOWNS

Rushing Waters Threaten to Halt Jap Advance; Millions In Danger Zone.

(By United Press)

SHANGHAI — A disaster surpassing the war in horror is threatened by floods in central China, reports from the Chinese and Japanese advance forces indicated today.

The muddy waters of the Yellow river were pouring through broken dykes onto the plains of Honan province to the south, onto the little farms of the peasants, through the streets of villages and along the roads over which the Japanese were pushing on their new drive to the south to take Hankow.

Already Threatened

Japanese military authorities here had received no direct reports from Chengchow, junction point of the East-West Lunghai railroad and the North-South Peiping-Hankow railroad, for three days. It was indicated that the rear troops of the Japanese, in their advance westward, already were threatened.

Military experts here said that if the river valley went amok, the entire scene of the fight for Hankow must be shifted. Flood experts said that if the river stayed out of bounds, hundreds of thousands of soldiers, Japanese and Chinese, and millions of helpless civilians, would be in danger.

How big the flood was, or exactly what was its cause, remained unknown. Weeks ago Chinese had threatened to flood central China if necessary to stop the Japanese. All they had to do was to cut the dykes.

It happened, however, that torrential rains in western China had swollen the river for many days past.

Today, the Chinese charged that the Japanese artillery and airplane bombardments on the central front had weakened the dykes so that the flood waters broke through. The Japanese charged that Chinese troops were supervising gangs of farmers in breaking the dykes at selected points.

BUYS MATERIAL FOR WATER JOB

City Board Lets Contracts to Two Mansfield Firms on Second Low Bids.

The city board of control today announced that it had awarded contracts totaling more than $39,000 to two Mansfield firms for materials to be used on the Woodland water project.

Largest of the contracts went to the Hughes Supply company, second lowest of four bidders, for supplying the city with approximately 9,000 feet of various size cast iron water pipe and 17 tons of various size fittings at a base bid of $36,833 44. This is approximately $3,000 lower than the city engineer's estimate.

Mayor Claude M. Hunter explained that the Hughes offer was accepted over the low bid of $34,512 88 submitted by the United States Pipe and Foundry company, Chicago, because of a net savings of $415 which would result in the difference in the pipe supplied.

He said the universal joint pipe bought from the Mansfield firm, also would save $2,700 which would have to be spent for 17 tons of caulking lead and labor necessary if the bell and spigot joint pipe supplied by U. S. Pipe had been purchased.

The contract for supplying the water department with 25 various size valves was awarded to the Standard Sanitary Manufacturing Supply company of Mansfield with a second low bid of $2,307. Ten firms submitted offers with the Ludlow Valve and Manufacturing of Troy, N. Y., low with a bid of $2,212.

Hunter said the contract had been awarded the Standard Sanitary firm which would supply the city with the Rennsealaer valve, used almost exclusively in the water department in the past 30 years, and which has proved satisfactory from a maintenance standpoint.

NIGHT SESSIONS TO BE CALLED IN BOTH CHAMBERS

Big Fight Over Wage-Hour Law Ends; Railroad Aid Plan Next On Calendar.

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Senate Leader Barkley (D.-Ky.) told reporters after a conference with President Roosevelt today that congress would adjourn Wednesday without enacting "any new" railroad legislation.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—Receiving word from President Roosevelt he would like to see congress adjourn this week preferably by Thursday, Democratic congressional leaders today rallied their forces for a race against time

Night sessions will be resorted to in both branches, but the last-minute move by the administration for emergency railroad legislation was believed to hold the key to the adjournment date.

In both senate and house there was polling of sentiment on proposed legislation to facilitate reorganization of carriers in financial distress Powerful leaders said that unless they can be assured there will be no prolonged fight over railroad-aid legislation, the proposals will be dropped

Eyes Rail Situation.

Railroad executives and representatives of the railway labor organizations representing hundreds of thousands of workmen have laid siege upon Capitol Hill and the White House. President Roosevelt was reported by intimates to be concerned over the railroad situation, particularly the threatened strike over wage cuts.

The big fight over the far-reaching wage-hour bill appeared to be over, with senate and house adoption of the unanimously-approved conference report believed certain At this stage of the legislation, parliamentary procedure requires that the report be voted upon in its entirety, one vote for or against the compromise as a whole.

The $3,723,000,000 relief-recovery bill, to which are pinned administration hopes for return of prosperity, likewise was over the hill in the legislative mill. Senate-house conferees were expected to reach an agreement on it late today

Finishing touches were given to the $275 000 000 second deficiency appropriation bill by the senate appropriations committee today

No difficulty in whisking this measure, with its scores of items including $35,000,000 to start the big navy program, to final passage was anticipated.

FAIR ENOUGH!

One Type of Paper That Ought Not Have Rights Under Freedom of Press

—By WESTBROOK PEGLER

NEW YORK—I could go on and on about the freedom of the press. We have had some rogue publishers in our journalism, but the very worst—and you may name your pet abomination—never had the audacity and the power for evil that are presented in the situation I'm going to describe.

A political demagogue and dictator rises to power as the boss of a state machine and starts a little sheet on a job press under a personalized masthead and a slogan promising to make of every man a king or to give somebody $5,000 —or something like that

He hammers away at his political opponents and at the orthodox or conventional papers without regard for the libel restrictions which handcuff the other side, because he is, as they say in the business, libel-proof. He hasn't so much as a typewriter by way of physical plant or an attachable dime of money

I don't mean that he hasn't got a dime. I mean a dime that can be attached. There is a great difference

And, of course, nobody wants to go to the gutter with him on a charge of criminal libel, because there is always the danger that he will prove it on you or prove something else just as embarrassing Old Jim Watson's remark that nobody ever won a fight with a skunk applies here

Well, for the first few weeks he throws his paper away free, but meanwhile the boys of the organization are soliciting subscriptions with the old blackjack Every jobholder in the state organization has to pay $2 50 or $4 or whatever, and every one of these is required to hustle a certain number of other subscriptions, the individual quotas being based on the individual's public pay. Do you get the idea? If the individual employe can sell subscriptions to his friends, all right But if he can't he has to buy them himself as a tax on his job.

And, of course, all the contractors who sell concrete and office supplies, tile, prison provisions, school books, pipe organs and band instruments to the state government or to local governments controlled by the state machine buy subscriptions too, so that in a comparatively short time your struggling little paper, shouting the battle cry of freedom, has a swell net paid-in-advance circulation. And now, when the other papers blast him, he blasts back that they are just jealous of his success in journalism and abusing their press prerogative to attack a business rival

If this is freedom of the press, says he, this coloration and distortion of the news, these reckless, insulting charges that his faithful, voluntary subscribers have been coerced, then he doesn't know but that, after all, maybe the freedom of the press ought to be curtailed or, myway, intrusted only to publishers who have a sense of responsibility and fairness.

For revenue he is doing fine. As a boss of the state in harmony with the national administration he counts the WPA workers and employes of other federal activities among his fold, and, of course, all the contractors and supply men doing business in these fields react the same as those who do business with the state.

And there is the advertising. The contractors and supply men all buy space, and manufacturers and merchants find it wise to do the same, not only in the political sense but from the practical viewpoint, because—no kidding—the sheet does have circulation. Never mind how it got the circulation. It's there, paid in advance Municipalities and counties, water districts, utility companies, even state lunatic asylums and colleges buy advertising in the dictator's paper, and the free press privilege runs for him because you could no more afford to suppress him, even knowing all about his methods, than you could afford to suppress the most ethical paper in the land, whatever that may be

When the national dictatorships develop in countries which go haywire the dictators and sub-dictators are the men who own the prosperous official papers Mussolini, for instance, and Goering and Streicher.

I like the commercial American press better.

Hollywood Speaks---

By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—Romance blossoms in the funniest places —and faces.

And the funnier, according to what is going on in the studios, the better.

"You can't kid love," used to be a maxim of the screen writers. You still can't—if it's young love and serious romance. But you certainly can if you're looking for a comedy love team that will do for the box-office what Wally Beery and the late Marie Dressler did

Observers see something like that in the new teaming of Joan Davis the fall girl, and Bert Lahr, the "oh boy, oh, boy" or "ung, ung, ung" comedian It was coincidence when they appeared as romantics in 'Love and Hisses," it may have been accident when they repeated in "Josette," but it's by careful design that they are together again in the Shirley Temple picture, "Lucky Penny" The object—you can bet on it—is to pave the way for a series of films which Lahr and Davis can carry minus other stars

The "straight" romance in this film is carried by Charlie Farrell there returning to his former studio after long absence) and Amanda Duff, importee from Broadway. But the Lahr-Davis combination is almost equally featured.

Lahr, veteran of the vaudeville and musical comedy stages, staunchly upholds his right to screen romance, thus: "A lot of people think I'm an old geezer because I've been around so long. They forget I started when I was a kid back in Yorkville—and I'm just 43 now"

His recent adventure in films has been more successful than his first talkie in which he starred. M-G-M made "Flying High" when the screen first sounded off, but it wasn't as funny as it might have been—probably because the studio took a successful stage play and 'wrote around' it Last year he came back for "Merry Go-Round of 1938" and has been here ever since

If you like reminiscences, he has them by the bushel. I liked especially his story about the time he was traveling in vaudeville with a midget partner. The girl traveled with her mother, and whenever (as always) Lahr got her on trains as a half-fare, she talked baby talk to mamma and convinced the conductors.

But one day a conductor demanded full fare

"That little girl needs a regular ticket," he told Lahr.

"Why?" said Bert

"Because" said the conductor, "I just passed her in the diner. She was reading the menu to her mother, smoking a cigaret and reading 'Snappy Stories'."

Creamy Foods Enhance Every Meal

By PAULINE SCHOFIELD
Home Service Department of the Ohio Fuel Gas Company.

Cream adds so much to so many foods—flavor, smoothness, nourishment, and also appearance where used decoratively. These are cream days—with fresh fruits and berries on the market; with salads that have a natural affinity for whipped cream; with summer desserts that simply "demand" cream. Here are a few suggestions that should "win applause" from guests or family everytime.

Creamy Chicken Hash.

3 tablspoons butter
1 cup finely chopped celery
1 chicken bouillon cube
2½ tablespoons flour
½ cup milk
1 cup cream
2 cups diced cooked chicken
Salt and pepper
Shoestring potatoes

Melt the butter in a saucepan, and add celery. Cover and cook over low heat for about 10 minutes, stirring frequently. Add bouillon cube and flour and mix well. Add the milk and cream gradually and cook, stirring constantly until thickened. Add the chicken and the salt and pepper to taste. Serve on shoestring potatoes or on toast. Serves four to six.

Cream of Mushroom Soup.

3½ tablespoons butter
1½ cups finely chopped mushrooms (about ½ lb)
2 chicken bouillon cubes
4 tablespoons flour
3¾ cups water
1 cup cream
Salt and pepper

Melt the butter in the top of a double boiler placed directly over the heat. Add the mushrooms and cook over low heat for about 4 minutes or until soft, stirring frequently. Place over hot water, add the bouillon cubes and flour and mix well. Add the water gradually and cook, stirring constantly until thickened. Add the cream and salt and pepper to taste. Reheat. Serves six.

Pineapple Chartreuse

1 No. 2 can sliced pineapple
9 maraschino cherries
1 cup hot water
1 package lemon flavored gelatine
1 cup cold water
½ tablespoon plain gelatine
2 tablespoons cold water
2 tablespoons sugar
¾ cup whipping cream

Drain the pineapple and place one slice in the bottom of a medium sized bowl (1¼ quart capacity). Line the sides of the bowl with 5 slices of pineapple and garnish with 6 halves of maraschino cherries. Place a smaller bowl (about 2½ cup capacity) in the center of the larger bowl and weigh it down with something heavy. Pour the hot water over the lemon flavored gelatine and stir until dissolved. Add the 1 cup cold water and pour between the two bowls. When firm remove the smaller bowl by filling with lukewarm water for about ½ minute or less. Sprinkle the plain gelatine over the 2 tablespoons of cold water, add ¾ cup of hot pineapple juice and the sugar and stir until the gelatine is dissolved. Add the remaining pineapple, diced, and the remaining maraschino cherries sliced. When mixture begins to congeal fold in the whipped cream. Pour into the center of the mold. When firm unmold on serving dish. Serves six.

Strawberry Cream Dessert.

1 pint strawberries
½ to ½ cup powdered sugar
1½ teaspoons gelatine
2 tablespoons water
Few grains salt
¾ cup whipping cream

Cut strawberries in thin slices, add sugar and mix well. Sprinkle the gelatine over the cold water and dissolve over hot water. Add the gelatine and salt to the strawberries, mix well and let cool until the mixture begins to congeal. Fold in the whipped cream. Chill. If desired, when serving garnish with additional whipped cream and whole strawberries with the hulls left on. Serves six.

Chocolate Cream Pie.

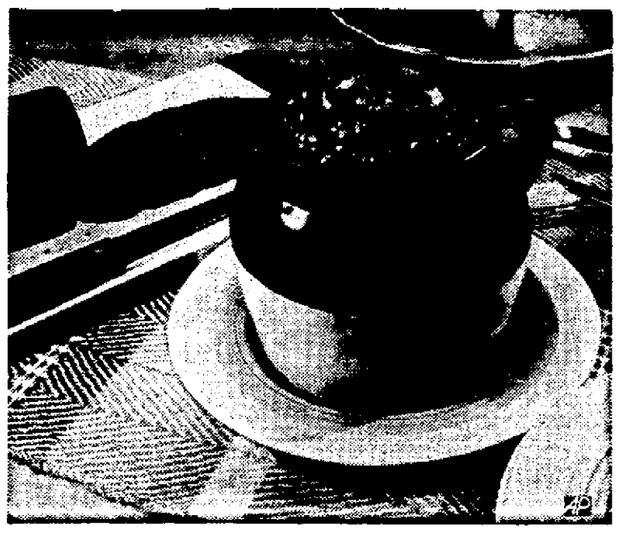
3 squares chocolate
6 tablespoons flour
1 cup sugar
½ teaspoon salt
1 egg
2 tablespoons butter
1¼ teaspoons vanilla
1 baked pie shell
1 cup whipping cream
1 cup confectioner's sugar

Heat the milk and chocolate in a double boiler. When the chocolate is melted beat with a rotary egg beater until the mixture is smooth. Mix the flour, sugar and salt and stir in the slightly beaten egg. Add a little of the hot milk and chocolate and mix well. Beat this into the first mixture and cook, stirring constantly, for about 5 minutes. Cook for 10 minutes longer stirring occasionally. Remove from the heat and stir in the butter and 1 teaspoon of the vanilla. Cool slightly and pour into the pie shell. When ready to serve, whip the cream, add the remaining ¼ teaspoon of vanilla and the confectioner's sugar and spread over the top of the pie.

Tasty Addition To Picnic



LOUISIANA BAKED BEANS

1 large onion, 3 cans baked beans, ⅓ cup pure New Orleans molasses, 1-3 cup dark brown sugar, ¾ cup ketchup, ¾ cup boiling water, ¼ pound salt pork.

Place onion in bean pot or casserole. Add beans. Combine molasses, sugar, ketchup and water. Pour over beans. Score rind of pork. Bury pork in beans leaving rind exposed. Bake in moderate oven (350 deg. F.) for one hour.

Favorite Famous Foods From Pennsylvania Dutch Kitchen

(By the AP Feature Service)

LITITZ, Pa.—The Pennsylvania Dutch are known for their quaint customs and their odd traits, but they are famous for their fine cooking.

Schnitz un knepp ponhaus, sauer kraut un pork, shoo-fly pie—all are the creations of the German settlers who came to eastern Pennsylvania early in the 18th century.

The dishes are as substantial as the good farm women who prepare them for men folk whose appetities are whipped to fine edge by mighty labor in the fields.

Stick to the Ribs.

"They stick to the ribs, that's why they are so good," said Ellen Carper, who, with her sister Lizzie, was stirring up a batch of knepp.

The Carper sisters, whose lives have been spent within an 18-mile radius of this Lancaster county town, are Mennonites, the largest sect of the Pennsylvania Dutch.

As Ellen dropped the knepp into boiling ham and schnitz — dried apples—Lizzie set the table.

When a Pennsylvania Dutch farmer eats, he eats. For dinner there was schnitz un kneep, dandelion dressed with bacon and sweetened vinegar and topped with sliced hard-boiled eggs, raw fried potatoes, shoo-fly pie, smearcase-cottage cheese thinned with cream—apple butter, home-made bread, mixed dried fruit and coffee.

Grace Before Meal.

The meal is served in one course. The steaming dishes are placed on the table and the diners go to it.

But before the first dish is passed there is a prayer. "No one would think of touching the food until grace has been said," Ellen explained.

Often schnitz un knepp, or apples and buttons as it is sometimes called, provides the complete meal. The savory ham and schnitz and the tasty dumplings cooked in the slightly sweetened broth is a mouth-watering dish to any hungry man.

Flavor Hints

Add grated cheese and minced onions to creamed eggs. Serve mayonnaise as a sauce on hot vegetables. Sprinkle a bit of nutmeg over sauce used with hot cauliflower.

Clean the piano keys by rubbing them with alcohol applied on a soft cloth.

Canape Scoop

Here's a canape that may be eaten easily with the fingers: Scoop out the centers of tiny rolls—about three inches long. When you're ready to serve them, spread the hollow sections with butter and stuff them with a highly seasoned ham relish.

Do cut-worms wreak havoc in your garden? Try this: Moisten a quart of bran with a cup of cold water. Add a teaspoon each of molasses and Paris green. Sprinkle some of the mixture around the plants just before dark. When you store the surplus, be sure to mark "Poison" on the container and keep it out of reach of the children.

ONE SHOE OFF + + +

By JOSEPH McCORD
(Copyright 1938)

CHAPTER XXVII

"Don't worry," he assured her. "That may sound crazy, but I never was more serious in my life. Larry knows I love her. I've known it from the first day I saw her, but I never told her until that day....when my uncle let her go. Of course she couldn't believe me, so I told her the next day, too. I intended to tell her as often as I could, until she would believe it. But she wrote me a note saying that she didn't care to see me again. Did she tell you?"

"Yes," Mrs. Layne admitted feebly. "I knew."

"And of course you're thinking I must be some sort of a...well, ill-bread to say the least, to be here now. The reason is that I have just found out why Larry wrote that note. It seems to me that all I've been doing is saying, 'I didn't know.' But I didn't discover that my uncle, Mr. Wardlaw, had come here to see Larry until this mornnig. You don't need to tell me, but I know what he wanted. That's why Larry wrote to me. She must have thought I was a beautiful cad! I'm right about that, am I not?"

"Why, he didn't see Larry," her mother admitted reluctantly. "He talked to Muriel. But...you're right."

"I knew it," Clay admitted with a sigh. "Please let me tell you what happened...everything."

He gave the whole miserable account, omitting none of its details so far as he knew them.

"I'm not here to apologize for my uncle," he concluded. "Much less to explain him. I don't think he had the slightest personal grievance against Larry or against your family. It must have been some sort of an obsession that he didn't want me to have any interests outside that mill... that and some crazy notion that he owned me because he had paid for my education. I don't know."

"It's quite clear to me," Mrs. Layne told him with unexpected astuteness. "Jealousy. That's all it is. I think Mrs. Kime was quite correct in what she told you. Mr. Wardlaw was very much in love with your mother. I can see how he thought you should have been his son. He's led a hard and bitter life. I think he always had been counting on you and, when you came, he couldn't bear the idea of sharing you with anyone."

"That may be it," Clay granted. "Just the same, I was a fool not to have had my eyes opened sooner and taken things into my own hands. I should have come here and made Larry hear the truth. ....Maybe she'll listen to you."

"I don't know. Larry seems different from my other children. I've never found it easy to understand her."

"Mrs. Layne, do you think that someone else has a claim on her affections? Young Grant, for instance?"

"I don't know. Wilbur is very fond of Larry, and he's a nice boy. I have rather hoped that Larry could like him. You see, I'm old-fashioned that way. I believe in girls marrying early and settling down. My Muriel had a very unhappy experience..."

"I understand so" Clay interposed.

"Well, that has been just one more reason that I have wanted to see Larry happy. I believe that she would have the same intense devotion to any man she loved.."

"So do I," Clay agreed warmly. "And I've a notion that I'm the man who should have it, too. You wouldn't have any personal objection to me, would you, Mrs. Layne? Even if I do have to call Mr. Wardlaw a relative out of courtesy? It wasn't my fault, after all. So far as I know, I'm perfectly respectable."

"Why, yes...I'm sure you are," Mrs. Layne admitted in some confusion.

"All right. That's one thing out of the way. What's your guess, about my chances? Do you think Larry does or ever could care a little about me."

"She's the only one who can tell you that, Mr. Yodel."

"No guesses?"

"Well...I'm not so sure she doesn't. Larry's been different since she knew you. My girls both tell me I'm too romantic for an old woman, but a mother can see some things. Larry has been pretty upset over losing her job at the mill. She's tried to make me think that was the only thing that worried her, but....she's been unhappy about something else. I can't explain it. But if you really do love her...I'd ask her about it. This may make a difference."

"You mean, then, that she did think I let Mr. Wardlaw come here?"

"Well, he let Muriel think so. I know that."

Clay beamed upon his hostess.

"You know, Mrs. Layne, one of the main reasons I want to marry Larry is so I can have you for a mother. I don't remember having one of my own. I'm counting on you to help me. Between us, we've got to see that Larry understands. If she throws me out, or tries to, I'm going to put up a fight. Will you help?"

"I might."

"Mrs. Layne, I'm scared. I've simply got to see Larry and do my best to make her understand, but I know that she isn't going to like the idea very well. I don't want to be rough. I wish you'd tell me how you think I ought to go about it. If I came here this evening, do you think you could arrange matters so I would be sure of a chance to talk to her? If I can only get a good start, I hope I can carry on. Would it do any good, do you think, if you were to tell her I was here? Tell her that I'm coming back later and that she owes it to me to listen to what I have to say?"

"I don't know....She just might decide to leave the house. If she did, I wouldn't be able to stop her, you know."

"I couldn't very well hide in a closet, or anything like that, I suppose."

Mrs. Layne pursed her soft lips thoughtfully.

"I shouldn't really do it, I'm sure," was her conclusion. "But I think I will. The girls should be home before long. I'll ask you to stay to supper. Larry can't very well go out if we have a guest, I should think. After that, it will be up to you. I'll promise to keep Muriel out of the way; Griff is working."

"That's mighty sweet of you," Clay declared. "I'll do it. I suppose there isn't anything I could do to help while we're waiting... any errands or anything?"

"Oh, no. It will be a cold supper. But, if I were you, I think I would move my car away from out front."

"Lord! I never thought of that. Thanks!"

Clayton Odell drew a long breath when Mrs. Layne, from her observation post at the window, announced that her two daughters had returned.

Larry and Muriel were laughing and talking as they came up the porch steps, Larry leading the way and tugging off her hat as she crossed the door.

"Back safe and sound?" was her mother's greeting, accompanied by a warning gesture of a finger laid to her lips. "We have company for supper," she cautioned in lowered tones. At the same time, she closed the front door quickly behind Muriel and paused with her ample back against it, as if to make sure that her younger daughter would not attempt to stage a flight. She listened somewhat fearfully.

"Oh . . . !" It had an almost strangled sound. Then Clay's bland tones.

"How do you do, Larry? Good afternoon, Miss Muriel."

The responses were subdued, but polite. Then Larry was in the hall, calling back a gracious, "Excuse me a minute, please," over her shoulder. She caught her mother by the arm and fairly dragged her to the kitchen, thrust her within and closed the door before she burst out wildly:

"Mums! How could you! How could you! You know . . ." A sob caught her throat. Tears of helpless anger filled her eyes.

Mrs. Layne met the charge with unlooked-for composure. A resentful attitude, she decided instinctively, would be best in this situation.

"See here, young lady," she countered, "I don't know of any good reason why I can't entertain guests here without asking your leave . . . even if you do seem to think you're grown up. I couldn't very well do anything but ask Mr. Yodel to stay until you girls came home."

"Oh, but Mums!" Larry groaned.

"But nothing! He's our guest and you're going to treat him that way. I know what I'm talking about. Now you walk right in and entertain him. Tell Muriel I want her to help me with supper."

"I . . . I can't!"

"And I could spank you! Come on, now. Do it for your mother. I don't often ask you for anything, do I?"

Larry's answer was to move to the mirror and glance at her hair. She took her comb and lipstick from her bag and made swift repairs.

"All right," she said gruffly. "But I'll never forgive you."

"Oh, yes you will. Trot along. Send Muriel out."

Muriel seemed relieved to have the message and left the living-room with incoherent excuses. Clay still was on his feet.

"Won't you sit down?" he urged Larry unsmilingly.

"I suppose so," she returned coldly. "But don't you think you're being rather contemptible? I do."

"I had to expect that," he replied gravely. "But I had to come, in spite of it. You see, Larry, something has happened. It's something that I have to tell you about or I'll never have any peace of mind. After you hear it, then it's up to you. If you're finished with me then for good and all, you needn't worry that I'll ever trouble you again."

"And of course we must take care of your peace of mind," Larry suggested flatly.

"All right, Miss Larry. If you're going to be tough about it, so am I. When I found you weren't home, your mother was good enough to hear what I had to say. Oh, yes . . . I told her that I was in love with you. She was kind. It won't hurt you to listen."

"It seems I have no choice."

Larry felt an odd little stir in her heart. Not for worlds would she have admitted a slight admiration for Clay's attitude, or that the tenseness of his firm jaw made him even more handsome than usual.

Floods, Surpassing War Horrors, Grip Central China

DYKES BROKEN, YELLOW RIVER PERILS TOWNS

Rushing Waters Threaten to Halt Jap Advance; Millions In Danger Zone.

(By United Press)

SHANGHAI — A disaster surpassing the war in horror is threatened by floods in central China, reports from the Chinese and Japanese advance forces indicated today.

The muddy waters of the Yellow river were pouring through broken dykes onto the plains of Honan province to the south, onto the little farms of the peasants, through the streets of villages and along the roads over which the Japanese were pushing on their new drive to the south to take Hankow.

Already Threatened

Japanese military authorities here had received no direct reports from Chengchow, junction point of the East-West Lunghai railroad and the North-South Peiping-Hankow railroad, for three days. It was indicated that the rear troops of the Japanese, in their advance westward, already were threatened.

Military experts here said that if the river valley went amok, the entire scene of the fight for Hankow must be shifted. Flood experts said that if the river stayed out of bounds, hundreds of thousands of soldiers, Japanese and Chinese, and millions of helpless civilians, would be in danger.

How big the flood was, or exactly what was its cause, remained unknown. Weeks ago Chinese had threatened to flood central China if necessary to stop the Japanese. All they had to do was to cut the dykes.

It happened, however, that torrential rains in western China had swollen the river for many days past.

Today, the Chinese charged that the Japanese artillery and airplane bombardments on the central front had weakened the dykes so that the flood waters broke through. The Japanese charged that Chinese troops were supervising gangs of farmers in breaking the dykes at selected points.

Olsen, Johnson Bring New Show To City Tuesday

Those perennial "screwballs" of the stage, Olsen and Johnson, who never fail to attract full houses in Mansfield, will open a two-day engagement at the Madison theater tomorrow with their new show, "Hellzapoppin."

The "Dizzy Dopes," as they frankly label themselves, have an all new show this season, which reviewers herald as being "fresh and original." One of their headline attractions is the Radio Rogues, an act that is familiar to Mansfielders becaus of their work in a number of movie shorts and radio.

The Madison has a full schedule for the next eight days. The Olsen and Johnson show holds the stage on Tuesday and Wednesday. Thursday night the Marty Hogan Dance Revue will be presented by the Spanish-American War Veterans, and the following Sunday the film, "The Birth of a Baby," opens a week's engagement there.

BUYS MATERIAL FOR WATER JOB

City Board Lets Contracts to Two Mansfield Firms on Second Low Bids.

The city board of control today announced that it had awarded contracts totaling more than $39,000 to two Mansfield firms for materials to be used on the Woodland water project.

Largest of the contracts went to the Hughes Supply company, second lowest of four bidders, for supplying the city with approximately 9,000 feet of various size cast iron water pipe and 17 tons of various size fittings at a base bid of $36,833.44 This is approximately $3,000 lower than the city engineer's estimate.

Mayor Claude M. Hunter explained that the Hughes offer was accepted over the low bid of $34,512.88 submitted by the United States Pipe and Foundry company, Chicago, because of a net savings of $415 which would result in the difference in the pipe supplied

He said the universal joint pipe bought from the Mansfield firm, also would save $2,700 which would have to be spent for 17 tons of caulking lead and labor necessary if the bell and spigot joint pipe supplied by U. S. Pipe had been purchased.

The contract for supplying the water department with 25 various size valves was awarded to the Standard Sanitary Manufacturing Supply company of Mansfield with a second low bid of $2,307. Ten firms submitted offers with the Ludlow Valve and Manufacturing of Troy, N. Y., low with a bid of $2,212.

Hunter said the contract had been awarded the Standard Sanitary firm which would supply the city with the Rennsealaer valve, used almost exclusively in the water department in the past 30 years, and which has proved satisfactory from a maintenance standpoint.

Mr. Remy was born Feb. 11, 1853, the son of Peter and Anna Touby Remy, in Washington township, and had spent most of his life in this city. Starting in the banking business more than 66 years ago, he retired from active business about six years ago.

He began his financial career in 1870 with the Richland National bank as bookkeeper, and served there until 1874 when he was made deputy treasurer of Richland county under John A. Lee and later under J. J. Douglas He served in this capacity until 1886 when he was elected county treasurer an office he held until 1890. Mr. Remy frequently commented on the fact that although the political aspect of county offices had changed many times, no Republican was ever elected to the office of treasurer after his term. He had been a life-long Democrat.

After leaving public office, he became cashier at the Farmers National bank, a position he held until 1904 when he was elected president of the bank.

Later he organized the Security Savings and Trust company, serving it as president, and in later years as liquidating officer. He retired in 1932.

NIGHT SESSIONS TO BE CALLED IN BOTH CHAMBERS

Big Fight Over Wage-Hour Law Ends; Railroad Aid Plan Next On Calendar.

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Senate Leader Barkley (D.-Ky.) told reporters after a conference with President Roosevelt today that congress would adjourn Wednesday without enacting "any new" railroad legislation.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—Receiving word from President Roosevelt he would like to see congress adjourn this week preferably by Thursday, Democratic congressional leaders today rallied their forces for a race against time.

Night sessions will be resorted to in both branches, but the last-minute move by the administration for emergency railroad legislation was believed to hold the key to the adjournment date.

In both senate and house there was polling of sentiment on proposed legislation to facilitate reorganization of carriers in financial distress. Powerful leaders said that unless they can be assured there will be no prolonged fight over railroad-aid legislation, the proposals will be dropped

Eyes Rail Situation.

Railroad executives and representatives of the railway labor organizations representing hundreds of thousands of workmen, have laid siege upon Capitol Hill and the White House. President Roosevelt was reported by intimates to be concerned over the railroad situation, particularly the threatened strike over wage cuts.

The big fight over the far-reaching wage-hour bill appeared to be over, with senate and house adoption of the unanimously-approved conference report believed certain. At this stage of the legislation, parliamentary procedure requires that the report be voted upon in its entirety, one vote for or against the compromise as a whole.

The $3,723,000,000 relief-recovery bill, to which are pinned administration hopes for return of prosperity, likewise was over the hill in the legislative mill. Senate-house conferees were expected to reach an agreement on it late today

Finishing touches were given to the $275 000 000 second deficiency appropriation bill by the senate appropriations committee today.

No difficulty in whisking this measure, with its scores of items including $35,000 000 to start the big navy program, to final passage was anticipated.

Mrs Schnabel, who had been ill five weeks was born in Germany, Aug 4 1865, and came to this country at the age of 16

Surviving are four sons, Fred, Carl, Albert and William of Bucyrus; two daughters, Mrs. Louis Woerth of Mansfield and Mrs Drumm, a brother, Charles Kramer of Bucyrus, and 22 grandchildren and five great grandchildren.

FAIR ENOUGH!

—By WESTBROOK PEGLER

NEW YORK—I could go on and on about the freedom of the press. We have had some rogue publishers in our journalism, but the very worst—and you may name your pet abomination—never had the audacity and the power for evil that are presented in the situation I'm going to describe.

A political demagogue and dictator rises to power as the boss of a state machine and starts a little sheet on a job press under a personalized masthead and a slogan promising to make of every man a king or to give somebody $5,000—or something like that.

He hammers away at his political opponents and at the orthodox or conventional papers without regard for the libel restrictions which handcuff the other side, because he is, as they say in the business, libel-proof. He hasn't so much as a typewriter by way of physical plant or an attachable dime of money.

I don't mean that he hasn't got a dime. I mean a dime that can be attached. There is a great difference.

And, of course, nobody wants to go to the gutter with him on a charge of criminal libel, because there is always the danger that he will prove it on you or prove something else just as embarrassing. Old Jim Watson's remark that nobody ever won a fight with a skunk applies here.

Well, for the first few weeks he throws his paper away free, but meanwhile the boys of the organization are soliciting subscriptions with the old blackjack. Every jobholder in the state organization has to pay $2.50 or $4, or whatever, and every one of these is required to hustle a certain number of other subscriptions, the individual quotas being based on the individual's public pay. Do you get the idea? If the individual employe can sell subscriptions to his friends, all right But if he can't he has to buy them himself as a tax on his job.

And, of course, all the contractors who sell concrete and office supplies, tile, prison provisions, school books, pipe organs and band instruments to the state government or to local governments controlled by the state machine buy subscriptions, too, so that in a comparatively short time your struggling little paper, shouting the battle cry of freedom, has a swell net paid-in-advance circulation. And now, when the other papers blast him, he blasts back that they are just jealous of his success in journalism and abusing their press prerogative to attack a business rival.

If this is freedom of the press, says he, this coloration and distortion of the news, these reckless, insulting charges that his faithful, voluntary subscribers have been coerced, then he doesn't know but that, after all, maybe the freedom of the press ought to be curtailed or, anyway, intrusted only to publishers who have a sense of responsibility and fairness.

For revenue he is doing fine. As a boss of the state in harmony with the national administration he counts the WPA workers and employes of other federal activities among his fold, and, of course, all the contractors and supply men doing business in these fields react the same as those who do business with the state.

And there is the advertising. The contractors and supply men all buy space, and manufacturers and merchants find it wise to do the same, not only in the political sense but from the practical viewpoint, because—no kidding—the sheet does have circulation. Never mind how it got the circulation. It's there, paid in advance. Municipalities and counties, water districts, utility companies, even state lunatic asylums and colleges buy advertising in the dictator's paper, and the free press privilege runs for him because you could no more afford to suppress him, even knowing all about his methods, than you could afford to suppress the most ethical paper in the land, whatever that may be.

When the national dictatorships develop in countries which go haywire the dictators and sub-dictators are the men who own the prosperous official papers. Mussolini, for instance, and Goering and Streicher.

I like the commercial American press better.

Hollywood Speaks---

By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—Romance blossoms in the funniest places—and faces.

And the funnier, according to what is going on in the studios, the better.

"You can't kid love," used to be a maxim of the screen writers. You still can't—if it's young love and serious romance. But you certainly can if you're looking for a comedy love team that will do for the box-office what Wally Beery and the late Marie Dressler did

Observers see something like that in the new teaming of Joan Davis the fall girl, and Bert Lahr, the "oh, boy, oh, boy" or "ung, ung, ung" comedian It was coincidence when they appeared as romantics in "Love and Hisses." It may have been accident when they repeated in "Josette," but it's by careful design that they are together again in the Shirley Temple picture, "Lucky Penny." The object—you can bet on it—is to pave the way for a series of films which Lahr and Davis can carry minus other stars.

The "straight" romance in this film is carried by Charlie Farrell (here returning to his former studio after long absence) and Amanda Duff, importee from Broadway. But the Lahr-Davis combination is almost equally featured.

Lahr, veteran of the vaudeville and musical comedy stages, staunchly upholds his right to screen romance, thus: "A lot of people think I'm an old geezer because I've been around so long. They forget I started when I was a kid back in Yorkville—and I'm just 43 now."

His recent adventure in films has been more successful than his first talkie in which he starred. M-G-M made "Flying High" when the screen first sounded off, but it wasn't as funny as it might have been—probably because the studio took a successful stage play and "wrote around" it. Last year he came back for 'Merry Go-Round of 1938' and has been here ever since

If you like reminiscences, he has them by the bushel. I liked especially his story about the time he was traveling in vaudeville with a midget partner The girl traveled with her mother, and whenever (as always) Lahr got her on trains as a half-fare, she talked baby talk to mamma and convinced the conductors.

But one day a conductor demanded full fare

"That little girl needs a regular ticket," he told Lahr.

"Why?" said Bert

"Because," said the conductor, "I just passed her in the diner. She was reading the menu to her mother, smoking a cigaret and reading 'Snappy Stories'."

REDS' NO-HIT PITCHER ONCE WAS OWNED BY DODGERS.

By SID FEDER
(Pinch-Hitting for Eddie Brietz)

NEW YORK — (AP) — The Reds have a double chuckle in Johnny (No-Hitter) Vander Meer . . . Because the Dodgers "discovered" him pitching for a Jersey church league back in '33 . . . And then, after farming him to Dayton, mixed up his transfer papers, so Judge Landis had to make him a free agent . . . The Reds picked him up, and now he's worth 25 G's of anybody's dough . . . Jack Dempsey is plenty burned up over that story that he was "hopped up" for the big seventh round of the second Tunney fight . . . "Never took any dope, hop or drug in any fight," says Jack . . . "I didn't need anything to make me fight; I was always in there to win" . . . And how, boy!

Isn't it about time for the folks to stop kidding themselves about Dizzy Dean? . . . If he isn't through, he's giving a swell imitation of it . . . For which credit Branch Rickey with the year's neatest trick. . . . Jimmy Foxx's slugging comeback is partly due to a shorter swing at the plate. . . . Some of the coast papers have been comparing Sammy Chapman of the A's with Joe DiMaggio day by day . . . And the way Joe's been going, he doesn't look any too good by the comparison. . . . The talk is popping again that Lefty O'Doul and his green suit will be back in the majors again in a year or so.

Trade winds: You hear rumors of a three-way deal with Van Mungo going to the Cubs, Ernie Lombardi being shipped from the Reds to Brooklyn, and Buddy Hassett winding up in Cincinnati. . . . Has anyone overlooked the fact that Mace Brown, the Pirates' relief flinger, is the leading National league pitcher? . . . The way the Indians dropped their last two series to the Red Sox and Yankees, doesn't look like Oscar Vitt had cured his boys of their sleeping sickness on the road.

Drops Fourth Straight by 7-6 Score as Allen, Feller Fail on Hill.

NEW YORK— (U.P.) — The Cleveland Indians were on the toboggan today and only confirmed optimists believed that Manager Ossie Vitt could pull them out of their tailspin and pilot them on to the American league pennant.

After making an impressive start of their eastern journey against Philadelphia and Washington, the Indians collapsed against Boston and the world champion New York Yankees.

Cleveland lost its fourth straigh contest to the Yanks yesterday by a 7 to 6 count and had its first place grip shaved to one and one-half games.

Loses Six on Road.

The contest concluded the Tribe's second eastern invasion and the club has yet to prove it can play anything resembling pennant winning ball in the sector. On its first trip east Cleveland had a record of four victories and five losses and the second invasion found them garnering five victories as against six defeats.

Pitching, supposedly the Indians' great asset, was decidedly mediocre throughout the trip. In 11 games against eastern foes, Cleveland saw only two of its starting hurlers go the route.

In a supreme attempt to beat the Yanks yesterday Manager Vitt used his two mound aces, Johnny Allen and Bob Feller, but they were not equal to the assignment.

Allen blew a four-run lead which the Indians gave him in the second inning and was derricked before he could retire a man in the sixth round. During his stay Allen gave up six hits. Feller quelled the Yank uprising in the sixth, but was the victim of another in the eighth.

The Iowa schoolboy permitted only two hits in the three innings he worked, but one of those was a home run by Rookie Joe Gordon with a mate on base that provided the Yanks with their winning margin.

Obtains 10 Hits.

Cleveland rapped Charley (Red) Ruffing for 10 hits, four of which were good for extra bases but the veteran right-hander managed to go the route to gain his eighth victory of the campaign.

The Indians hammered across four runs in the second, one in the third and their final counter in the sixth.

Earl Averill, Hal Trosky and Sammy Hale paced the Indians' attack with two hits each.

Cleveland was not scheduled today, but returns home to open a 15-day game stand tomorrow. Each of the four eastern teams and Detroit will face the Indians during the stand.

Predicts Win For Champion

Braddock Says Louis Will Retain Mitt Title.

SPECULATOR, N. Y. — (U.P.) — Former Champion James J. Braddock watched Max Schmeling, German heavyweight, work eight brisk rounds against an array of sparring mates Sunday, then reiterated his prediction that he would fail to regain the title when he meets Joe Louis in Yankee stadium next week.

"He is slower than ever, his punches are not as fast or as hard, and he is a mark for a left-hand punch," was Braddock's summation. "It will be Louis within seven rounds."

In a long workout yesterday Max showed only one flash of viciousness. Against Heavyweight Joe Mack, he let go a dozen stiff right handers to the head and jaw, visibly rocking his man.

POMPTON LAKES, N. J.,—(U.P.) —Joe Louis, who defends his heavyweight boxing title against Max Schmeling next week, appeared near peak physical condition today after one of the hardest sparring sessions of his training tenure.

Almost 4,000 fans watched him step six fast rounds yesterday with three sparring partners.

Hurls Inmates To 12-6 Win

Striking out 17 and permitting only two earned runs as his teammates committed eight errors, Graves hurled the reformatory baseball team to a 12 to 6 victory over the Cooper-Bessmer club of Mt. Vernon at the institution Saturday. Buckham's home run in the eighth accounted for one of the Mt. Vernon earned runs.

Blaney, reformatory right fielder, obtained two home runs and a double to send seven runs across the plate.

Budge-Mako Doubles Defeat Among Week-End Highlights

American Tennis Stars Lose to Unknowns In French Hard-Court Finals.

NEW YORK— (U.P.) —The week-end sports program was highlighted by Ralph Guldahl's repeat in the U. S. Open golf championship and the U. S. Wightman cup tennis team's eighth consecutive victory over England.

The No. 1 upset occurred in Paris when Don Budge and Gene Mako were beaten by a pair of youngsters in the French hard-court doubles final. Budge and Mako, regarded as the world's foremost doubles combination, fell 2-6, 6-3, 9-7, 6-1 before Yvon Petra and Bernard Destremeau, 21-year-old Frenchmen playing their first year as a doubles team. Budge had won the singles title on Saturday, and experts expected he and Mako to have little trouble in adding the doubles crown. After losing the first set, the young Frenchmen capitalized on Mako's ragged game and directed every return his way.

At Wimbledon, Uncle Sam's women tennis players defeated Great Britain's team 5-2 in the international series that began in 1923. It was the 12th victory for the U. S. in 16 meetings and the eighth straight. The seven-match play was featured by the two singles victories of 33-year-old Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, who, after a two-year layoff because of a back ailment, will try to win her eighth Wimbledon title later this month.

The ambition of all baseball pitchers was realized by 22-year-old Johnny Vander Meer of the Cincinnati Reds Saturday. He pitched a no-hit, no-run game against the Boston Bees to earn a place among baseball's immortals.

Other sports results included Miss Maureen Orcutt's victory in the Women's Metropolitan golf championship by routing Charlotte Glutting 10-9; Patty Berg winning the trans-Mississippi golf crown with a 6 and 5 victory over Mrs. Opan S. Hill; and winning of the $5,000 Shevlin Stakes by B. F. Whitaker's Mythical King, a length and a half victory over Maxwell Howard's The Chief at Aqueduct.

Paul Jesson Checks Off 72

Puts Together 35 and 37 at Possum Run.

A forenoon rain spoiled what probably would have been a record day for Mansfield golf courses Sunday. However, the courses dried off quick, and there was considerable play in the afternoon.

Few outstanding scores were reported over the week-end. Topping the week-end scoring was Paul Jesson, who carded a 35 and 37 for a 72 at Possum Run. Pete Linster checked off a 75 on the same lay-out, while Lawrence Deley rolled out a 78 and Joe Casper and Mike Mihalic scored 79's.

The best reported at Coolridge was a 73 by Tony Schadek. He put together rounds of 37 and 36.

Chuck Schiedler had seven one-putt greens holes as he chalked up a 37 at Coolridge. Other Coolridge scores: Nick Loris, 36-38-76; John Weber, 39-39, 78; Steve Stirtzinger, 4-31-80; Red Keck, 39; Peter Zimmerman, 40.

Home Clubs Hope to Escape Fate of Last Week's Hosts

Johns, North Parks Scenes of Today's City Softball League Games.

HOPING to escape the fate of their hosts in the opening games, the Johns and North park shoftball teams will inaugurate their home City Class A schedules today.

The Liberty and Prospect park teams were the hosts in the initial tilts last week, and both were defeated.

Wins In Eleventh.

Not badly, mind you, but defeated, nevertheless. Prospect park forced the game into 11 innings before bowing to the Northerners to lose by one run. Liberty park also lost by one run.

Today's games will present more of a definite idea as to which teams possess most of the strength.

Liberty park goes to North park for one of the 6 p. m. tilts, and the Johnnies are hosts to Prospect.

Interesting games are expected at both fields, with the outcome very much in doubt. However, Johns and North parks will go into the conflicts the favorites on the strength of their first game triumphs.

It is likely that Johns park will again place its victory hopes on the good right arm of Jimmy Fullager, who registered three triumphs in as many games last week. Ted Frisbee, who was the victim of North park's 11-inning victory, or Dick Treasch will oppose him.

Ready For Service.

John Bush or Joe Wentz will go to the hillock for the Liberties. Both saw service in the first game. Garver is expected to be on the firing line for the Northerners.

Call in Specialists to Check Up on Dean.

CHICAGO —(U.P.)— Specialists were called in today to determine once and for all what's wrong with Dizzy Dean's helpless pitching arm.

Seeking some return on an investment of $250,000 in cash and players, Manager Charlie Grimm ordered Dean to remain home and submit to a complete physical check-up while the Chicago Cubs embarked on an eastern trip. The month of rest prescribed by Dr. John F. Davis, Cub physician, left Dean with an arm as limp as it was before.

"Dean is no good to us the way he is," Grimm said. "We've got to find out what's wrong with his arm so we've called in these specialists."

Rex Billiards Split Games

Defeat Lucas After Losing to Johnsville, 2 to 1.

The Rex Billiards split even in their games played over the week-end.

Losing 2 to 1 to Johnsville at League park Saturday, the Cuemen came back Sunday to trim Lucas, 6 to 2, at Lucas.

Held to six hits, the Billiards mixed their blows with five walks to tally twice in the second and four times in the third to account for all of their runs as Russ Remy scattered Lucas' nine swats. Remy fanned nine without issuing a walk.

In addition to pitching a standout game, Remy obtained two of the Billiards' six hits, Gehrisch of Lucas hit for the circuit.

Saturday's game developed into a pitchers' duel, with Smith permitting the Johnnies six hits. The Billiards secured only five off the deliveries of Shaffer and Burgraff.

Guldahl Holds Own With Par To Retain National Open Crown

By JAME L. KILGALLEN

DENVER — (INS) — Anyone who will go out and bet on himself at the bookmakers' odds of 8 to 1 against him must "know" something. Well, Ralph Guldahl did. He knew himself.

He knew (well, he was pretty sure, anyway) that he could beat a field of some 157 of America's top flight golfers over one of the trickiest, most hazardous courses in the country. And he did.

He did it effectively, convincingly—leaving no room for beefs or bleats or "ifs" or "ands" or "buts." And when it was all over the winner "and still champion" was Ralph Guldahl of Madison, N. J.

The poker-faced, imperturbable Guldahl finished with a score of 284, even par for 72 holes, over the perilous Cherry Hills layout. At the finish it was practically "no contest" for the next best man, handsome Dick Metz of Chicago, was six strokes back—with 290.

Guldahl before the tournament started laid a little bet of $45 on himself at the prevailing odds of 8 to 1 and collected $360 from the bookmaker after he had completed his workmanlike job.

RALPH GULDAHL

Surely the fellow must have confidence in himself. I'm sure no one who watched him "go after" Metz and Jimmy Hines of Great Neck, N. Y., AA leaders at the three-quarter mark — has any doubt about that.

While Metz and Hines, to say nothing of lanky Henry Pickard of Hershey, Pa., were faltering in the final days of play, the coldly calculating Guldhl "turned on the heat" to wind up with a dazzling sub-par round of 69.

Guldahl, starting at 4 strokes back of Metz and 1 stroke back of Hines with 18 holes to play (Picard already had "blown up") went to town.

Playing as casually as you or I would in a Sunday match with friends, the strapping Guldahl began to click off pars with mathematical precision. Ahead of him were Metz and Hines and soon news drifted back that they were faltering. Guldahl's only reaction to the good news was a determined tug at his cap which seemed to say, "well, this fellow Guldahl isn't going to crack. They've got me to beat now. His next drive had a venomous punch back of it.

By the time he had finished the ninth hole with a par 35, it was all over but the hullabaloo. Metz had finished the last round with a mediocre 79 and Hines was going worse, eventually winding up with a terrible 83. Guldahl went on making beautiful shots to card a 69.

Stop Yankees, Beat Giants, Rivals Cry

Ruppertmen Advance on Cleveland Club.

By GEORGE KIRKSEY

NEW YORK —(U.P.)— The paramount issue in the majors today concerned the New York Yankees and the Giants and how to keep them from putting on their third straight subway world series.

A few days ago both New York teams seemed to be cracking up. The Yanks lost three in a row to the Chicago White Sox and the Giants dropped six in a row and were floundering all over the west.

Third Straight.

Overnight they both leaped back into the foreground of the pennant picture. The Yanks righted themselves in the nick of time and today boasted a winning streak of three straight which lifted them to within a game and a half of the league-leading Cleveland Indians. The Giants fought their way back into the National league lead by winding up their western campaign with five victories in their last six games. Again the cries arise: Stop, the Yankees! Stop the Giants!

Cleveland, with a 3½-game lead when they came to New York, moved back home today after taking two straight lickings from the Yanks. The Yanks proved again that when the chips are down they are the best club in baseball. They beat Cleveland 7 to 6 yesterday.

In the west the Giants divided a doubleheader with the St. Louis Cardinals to maintain their two-game National league lead over the Chicago Cubs. The Giants ran their winning streak to five straight by taking the first game, 8-5. The Cards won their first game of the season from the Giants by annexing the nightcap, 4-1. Carl Hubbell failed in a bid for his 200th victory.

It was "big inning" day around most of the circuit yesterday. The Detroit Tigers took down the prize by beating Washington 18-12, after trailing at one time, 11-1. With Gehringer and York hitting homers in the sixth the Tigers scored 10 runs. Even so they went into the ninth one run behind, but staged a seven-run rally.

The Athletics won the day's only twin triumph by beating the St. Louis Browns, 8-3, and 1-0.

The Boston Red Sox and the Chicago White Sox broke even in a double-header. The Red Sox won the opener, 3-2 and the White Sox took the nightcap, 4-3.

One Big Inning.

Scoring nine runs in the eighth inning the Cubs beat Brooklyn 9-3, and then succumbed to Freddy Fitzsimmons' four-hit pitching to lose 6-0 in the second game.

Cincinnati split with Boston, the Bees winning the first game, 6-5 in 10 innings and the Reds taking the second, 7-4.

Scoring ten runs in the fifth and sixth innnigs Pittsburgh won from the Phillies, 11-5. Mace Brown scored his eighth relief victory.

Yesterday's hero—Joe Gordon, Yankie rookie second baseman, who hit a homer with a mate on base to give the world champions a 7-6 victory over Cleveland.

Sheriff Cites New Law Designed To Curb Farm Thefts

Sheriff E. P. Long called attention today to a new state law now in effect which is designed to aid officers in investigation of thefts of articles or livestock from farms.

The law requires dealers in livestock, grain, seed, poultry or wool to keep detailed records of purchases, the names of persons from whom purchases are made, nature of the purchases and the license of number of the car or truck which makes the deliveries. Violation of the law carries a fine of from $10 to $500.

Truckers may be stopped at any time at the request of highway patrol officers and required to give information concerning the nature of the load on their trucks and names of persons to whom shipments are consigned. Refusal to provide information subjects the trucker to a fine of from $10 to $50 or 30 days to six months in jail, or both.

The law provides a fine of from $50 to $500 or three years in the penitentiary for persons who destroy fences in order to remove stock or crops from farms without permission.

U. S. Bureau Says Cleveland Crash Was Caused By Engine Fire.

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The crew of a giant transport plane that carried 10 persons to death in a plunge May 24 near Cleveland used reasonable precaution to avoid the crash, a bureau of air commerce investigating board reported today.

The investigators concluded that fire in the United Air Lines ship's right engine accessory section probably caused the accident.

DEVALUATION TALK HOLDS BACK MARKET

Leaders Slip Fractions to Point or More as Stocks Drift Lower.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—The stock market drifted into lower territory today, leaders slipping fractions to a point or more.

Restraining selling forces, brokers reported, was the fact dollar devaluation talk still was heard in financial quarters. At the same time the principal European currencies, strong last week in terms of the dollar on rumors of a possible boost in the world gold price, lost their buoyancy.

Bonds and commodities were mixed, with grains inclined to dip. Holders of steel found little in weekly trade reviews to encourage them.

The magazine "Steel" said dullness continued unbroken in virtually all depatrments of this industry, with buying confined to a minimum, measured by current needs, and no accumulation of inventory taking place.

The survey credited public works of various kinds with providing the only important tonnages in the structural and reinforcing markets.

DANGER AHEAD, WRITER SAYS

ing Czechoslovakia, and that the Germans, knowing what war means, would never start one, but that Czechoslovakia's very existence is a mockery of the principle of self-determination, aroused deep but restrained indignation here.

Resentment was particularly great over his statement that Czechoslovakia had mobilized without grounds.

The government's desire to be conciliatory is, however, so resolute that it is unlikely any official reply will be made.

But the best commentary upon Hess's speech was the statement made to me at Reichenberg, chief city of Sudeten Germany, by three leaders of the Henlein party This statement reveals more of the true situation than reams of official declarations.

Their spokesman, who desired that his name not be used, but who was willing to have his views placed before the American public, declared.

"It must come to war, because the Czechs will defend themselves. I admit they will fight. When they are seized by the throat, they will lash out.

"We cannot avoid it, because no agreement is possible.

"On top of 1,000 years of hatred between the Germans and the Slavs came Germany's national awakening in 1933, and now the gulf between is impassable.

"We shall not be content with mere autonomy, nor even with our annexation by the reich.

"The reich must have all Bohemia and Moravia."

This includes, of course, Prague and the wealthiest part of the country.

"Bohemia and Moravia will be our colonies," he continued. "We'll give Slovakia to Hungary."

I asked what they are going to do with the 7,000,000 Czechs.

"We'll either Germanize them, or the Czechs will simply have to go under."

"The fate of 7,000,000 Czechs can hardly be allowed to interfere with the destiny of 78,000,000 Germans—for remember, we shall be 78,000,000 when we come into the Reich.

"There are too many of us with too little room, and we intend to burst out.

"We don't care about colonies overseas, our colonies are here at our back door.

"It is nonsense to deny that we do have an urge towards the east, and after we have conquered Czechoslovakia, we will obtain Rumanian oil and Hungarian wheat by economic conquest."

Asked when the Sudetens expected the great day, he replied:

"When England comes to her senses.

"She was ready to fight us. She would have marched that day the Czechs mobilized if Germany had marched.

"But we are confident that England will not continue for long ready to risk her empire and plunge the world into war on account of 7,000,000 Czechs

"If England stays neutral, Italy will also, but if England comes in, Italy will seize Egypt and bring order into the Mediterranean."

Here the spokesman ended on a ringing note:

"Remember, we Sudetens are Prussian!"

Now and then he interpolated: "This is my personal view." Almost every sentence of his statement would be denied by party hearquarters, but his colleagues, officials of the party, constantly nodded him assent.

Motoring back through Sudeten teritory, we picked up a young Nazi officer wearing the black uniform of the newly-organized Sudeten storm troops.

"The solution is simple," he declared. "We have reduced it to a formula: Prague, Pilsen, Ostrava."

I asked what he meant.

"Those three cities control Czechoslovakia's industry and national life," he said. "Our airplanes—meaning the reich's airplanes—can destroy Prague, Pilsen and Ostrava within 48 hours. Victory will then be ours."

equal anxiety among diplomatic observers was how the non-Sudetens would react to any attempt by the government to make sweeping concessions.

As far as can be judged by an outsider the attitude of the Czech citizenry seems to be that the republic has demonstrated its willingness to fight for its existence and can count on the great democracies—France and Britain—to help it against an invader.

France's fomer Premier Pierre Flandin said in a speech at Vienne, France, last night that the Daladier government was prepared to order mobilization to aid Czechoslovakia if she were invaded by Germany. He warned that the danger of war was increasing in Europe and urged members of the democratic alliance party to oppose war unless France herself were attacked.

His speech brought an immediate reply from Pierre Got, radical socialist former air minister, who told the national congress of republican reserve officers at Chambery:

("To say that not one French soldier should expose his life for Czechoslovakia means that not one English soldier should shed his blood if France were attacked. Collective security is a condition of French security.")

In the words of a Czech Legionnaire who played an important role in shaping the republic:

"What Henlein wants is what Hitler wants and what Hitler wants is not a little autonomy for the Sudeten Germans. What he wants is Czechoslovakia."

OHIO A. F. OF L. MAPS STAND ON STATE ELECTION

Union Expected to Fight Any Candidate Bidding for Backing of CIO.

(By United Press)

COLUMBUS—The Ohio Federation of Labor, although not endorsing any candidate for state office, was expected today to throw its influence against any candidate courting the favor of the rival committee for industrial organization.

Approximately 700 delegates to the A. F. of L.'s "non-partisan" political conference Sunday were told by Francis J. Dillon, personal representative of William Green, president of the A. F. of L., that the meeting "could properly be termed the Ohio Funeral for the CIO."

No Endorsements.

The convention voted to continue its policy of working politically within the framework of existing parties and refrained from endorsing candidates. Secretary Thomas J. Donnelly indicated that endorsements, if any, would be voted by local units.

In a declaration of principles, the convention agreed that the O. F. of L. "is prepared to assume its responsibility in all matters affecting it, and particularly in respect to good faith in the execution of contracts entered into as a result of collective bargaining."

It approved a policy of support palitically for "those who have shown a friendliness to the must and national demands of labor."

Speakers referred to CIO election defeats and politicians that to solicit CIO support "is to court defeat."

A sugestion by Fred Hock, Cincinnati representative of building trades unions, that Gov. Martin L. Davey be invited to address the convention was ruled out of order after mention of the governor's name brought boos and cheers.

The convention voted support, however, for legislation embodying the governor's proposed $5,000,000 welfare institution building program.

Although opposed to the sales tax, delegates approved a resolution opposing attempts at its repeal this year. Opposition was renewed to a proposed constitutional amendment for appointment rather than election of state supreme court and appellate court judges.

An 18-point legislative program was unanimously approved. It urged:

An eight-hour day and 40-hour week on public works; permanent relief legislation; and enactment of a state labor relations act.

DRIVER FACES DEATH CHARGE

where Mrs. Turk's daughter is to graduate today.

Miss Kovachy's death was the third traffic fatality of the year in Mansfield and the seventh to be recorded in Richland county. At this time last year, 10 persons had lost their lives in accidents in the county.

State Toll Six.

The death of Miss Kovachy was one of six caused by traffic accidents throughout the state over the week-end. Four were in Cleveland.

According to police the collision occurred Saturday at 3:30 p. m. when Strohminger, going north on Lexington avenue, attempted to pass a large truck, also going north.

According to witnesses Strohminger swung to the left side of the road and cut back sharply ahead of the large truck. Harold Ellason, Cleveland, driver of the truck told police that the car struck the front end of his machine and then hit the Cleveland car head-on.

The impact rolled the Kovachy car over, pinning all five occupants in it. They were extricated by motorists and police, who had to rip open the top of the machine.

Police said the car was thrown 60 feet by the force of the crash. The other car they said, travelled 78 feet down the road and skidded into a driveway and was headed the opposite direction from which it had been traveling.

At the hospital Saturday, young Turk told police that his mother was driving and that they were traveling at a moderate rate of speed.

"I was sitting in the front seat and I saw the other car coming down the road at a terrific rate of speed," he told the officer. "There was a crash and that's all I remember."

When police arrived at the scene of the collision, the occupants of the Mansfield car had fled, leaving behind them three bottles of beer in the car, Police Chief Meade K. Bates said. Two empty bottles were found near the machine, Bates said.

The two picked up near the accident were Paul F. Hieneking, 18, of 218 Newman street and Emmett Null, no address. Null was taken into custody when pointed out by witnesses as one of the passengers. Hieneking was found in a ditch in a field a block from the accident scene after a half hour search, officers said.

Four hours later, Strohminger was brought to headquarters by his parents. He is held in the county jail without bond pending his arraignment in municipal court tomorrow.

In a Sunday morning accident in Mansfield, Herbert Fraley, 20, R. D. 1, was slightly injured when the truck in which he was riding as a passenger collided with an automobile driven by Peter Rabel, 189 Orange street. The accident occurred on North Mulberry street.

Two persons were hurt near Savannah north of Ashland yesterday, when cars driven by Harold Stover, 21 Savannah, and Marcus Henderson, near Ashland collided on Route 250. Stover and his brother, George, 27, were injured, the former seriously, and both are in Samaritan hospital at Ashland. Neither Henderson, nor Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Hammer, Ashland, riding in the Stover car, were hurt.

STILL HOPEFUL

Woman Flier Thinks Amelia Earhart May Be Alive.

NEW YORK—(INS)—A bare possibility that Amelia Earhart, American aviatrix lost a year ago, may still be alive, was expressed today by Jacqueline Cochran, noted woman flier.

"It is a pretty long time since she disappeared to say Amelia Earhart is alive, but I do think that if the Gilbert group of islands were minutely searched there is a possibility that the wreckage of her plane—if not the plane itself—might be found," Miss Cochran declared, adding:

"And there is a possibility that she might be found alive, even today."

Miss Earhart and her navigator, Fred Noonan, never were heard from after a 2,700 mile hop from New Guinea to tiny Howland island, in the Pacific.

$30,000 ANNEX PLANS APPROVED

Shelby Lutheran Church to Erect Three-Story Addition to Include Auditorium.

SHELBY—Plans were approved Sunday for the $30,000 addition to the First Lutheran church at a called session of the congregation at the church, church officials said today.

The plans, presented by H. C. Brokaw, building committee member, called for a three-story building to be erected east of the present edifice. The ground floor would consist of a combination auditorium, dining hall and assembling hall seating approximately 450 persons.

The first floor would provide for additional class rooms, assembly room, and ladies' parlor. On the top story would be seven regular class rooms and two assembly rooms. Cloak rooms would be located on all the floors.

The project will be started within several months if $15,000 can be raised by pledges and donations by that time, church officials stated. Preliminary legislation had been approved by the church council prior to the final approval given by the congregation Sunday.

CANDIDATES PAY COUNTY $465 IN FILING CHARGES

Seven Congressional Aspirants Post $350 to Get Names on Primary Ballot.

With the dust of campaign filing cleared away, the Richland county board of elections checked its 1938 business today and found that it did more work for less money than in recent election years.

The candidates for congress saved the day for the election board, each of seven who filed contributing $50 to the county coffers. The total collected for the year so far is $465.

The greater part of the 200 petitions handled by the board were for central committee posts and brought no revenue to the county, Walter Underwood, deputy clerk, explained.

Must Get Salary.

Only candidates for offices which pay salaries are required under the state law to pay filing fees, and the fee in such cases is one-half of one per cent of the annual salary. Funds collected from candidates go into the county general fund.

Because the office of congressman pays $10,000 a year, the highest in the district, the filing fee for that office is the most that can be collected by the election board.

There was only one petition filed for county auditor, which requires a $20.75 filing fee. There were two for county commissioner at $13.50 each, and four for county representative at $10 each.

Because the Richland county election board is the largest of any of the six in the 17th congressional district, all candidates for offices in the district must file in Mansfield.

The highest honor the Loyal Order of Moose can confer upon a member was received by Earl A. McFarland, past dictator of the Mansfield lodge, at the national convention in Mooseheart, Ill., last week when he was presented with the pilgrim degree.

The degree is awarded to those who have contributed outstanding service to the organization. Senator James J. Davis, director general of the lodge, presided at the presentation.

McFarland, a former Mansfield mayor, served the Mansfield lodge as dictator five years. He is now president of the sixth district of the Ohio State Moose association and a trustee of the lodge.

4 DRAW FINES

Auto Accident, Intoxication Leads Them to Jail.

Four Mansfielders, including a married couple, who figured in an automobile accident late Saturday near Alta, were in the county jail today serving out fines for intoxication.

Carl Baker, 58, rear of 277 East second street, owner of the car in which the four were riding, was fined $25 and costs when he pleaded guilty in municipal court this morning. His wife, Mrs. Evelyn Baker, 43; Walter Weber, 41, of 270 Park avenue east, and Charles McMillin, 41, same address, were fined $10 each on the same count.

Deputy Sheriff J. R. Heller said Baker's car was tipped precariously in a ditch along the Lexington-Springmill road, about one mile north of Alta, when Baker was removed from the driver's seat. None of the group was injured.

COURT CANCELS LICENSES OF 2

Two week-end traffic offenders arraigned in municipal court today were fined and their driving rights revoked while the case of a third was continued until Saturday.

R. E. Ewing, Jeromesville, charged with operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol, pleaded guilty and was fined $75 and costs and his operator's permit revoked for one year. A 120-day jail sentence was suspended on the condition that he pay the damages to the other car involved in the collision.

Ewing was arrested by state highway patrolmen on route 79 near Bellville, late Saturday following a collision with a machine operated by Foster Stough, 219 East Second street.

U. S. FINDS CROP FUTURE BRIGHT

Record Wheat Harvest Predicted; Western Farmers Rejoice.

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Prospects for early crops were described by the agriculture department today as better than in any spring since 1929.

A record wheat crop is indicated. Conditions have been favorable for cotton and tobacco. Corn planting got off to a late start because of wet weather but the crop is progressing and normal weather would assure a good harvest.

Western farmers and stockmen are rejoicing over the best moisture conditions in years. The milk supply is larger in proportion to the national population than at any time in the last 13 years.

A Farmer's Diary

By Calvin A. Byers

BETWEEN showers I took my hatchet and the wheelbarrow and went out to get stakes for my early tomatoes I followed along the furrows where the blackberry blossoms of a week ago had given place to the first elderberry sprays

At the southern edge of the woods, a wagon road leads through a leafy arch in to the heart of a clearing where loggers cut and haul out logs last winter Along this winding trail, I wheeled my barrow seeking a place where fallen and uncut tops of trees would furnish slim stakes less than two inches in diameter

At a spot where cord wood had been cut and piled in ranks. I found plenty of brush with small branches such as I desired. A few blows with the hatchet made them into four or five-foot lengths And I began to load my wheelbarrow.

The cleared place was a hundred yards or more across, with here and there a few slender, very tall young trees still left uncut These will grow faster, now that their larger and more older companions are gone The twisted trunk of an old beech was left too crooked to be of value. When I had worked until I was tired, I sat down for a little while on the fallen giant and mopped my face

The mosquitoes were bad A swampy place nearby had furnished them breeding grounds I noticed the jointed violets loaded with purplish green pods —I broke one open and admired the knot of white seeds, like polished pearls They will be black a little later

Among the violets at my feet, the seedling elm and beeches of one and two years growth gave prophecy for the future — of prone trunks, of fresh-cut flying chips the odor of bleeding wood, and of tomato sticks for a man's great-grand-children.

When I had cut a few more than a hundred sticks, I swatted the last of the mosquitoes, picked up the handles of my carrier and went back across the open field, slowly, for the ground was soft. Once the wheel dropped into hole and I almost lost the entire load whose tops had been sheared off by the plane before it crashed.

DIRLAMS FOUND IN LOST PLANE

Collier reported that the luxury liner, lost in the storm and flying blindly, had struck the peak squarely with such terrific impact that the fuselage had exploded into bits Pieces of the wreckage were scattered for hundreds of feet and bodies were thrown over a wide area.

"I climbed among the wreckage" Collier told an International News Service reporter "it was horrible The plane must have struck the mountain at full speed and with terrific force. Bodies were scattered right and left I counted eight or nine bodies They were unrecognizable, in pretty bad condition from the wreck and exposure Everyone must have died instantly"

Due to Get $1,000 Reward.

Young Collier's search was filled with mishaps and danger He left Fresno last Tuesday, stocked up with supplies at Yosemite and started alone and afoot into the wild and treacherous mountains Once he fell into a creek and lost his shoes and stockings and had to walk barefoot back to Yosemite but he stubbornly continued the search, which ended yesterday For his efforts he probably will receive the $1 000 reward offered by the TWA company

His discovery of the wreckage solved the mystery of the plane's fate which has been shrouded by the snows of the High Sierra Nevadas for more than three months

Hundreds of natives in that district had taken part in the search for the plane and the company sent out searching planes daily for weeks after the tragedy in a futile attempt to locate the wreckage.

The Dirlam family especially the mother, had never given up hope that by some miracle the children might be found alive. She had a feeling, she told relatives, that Tracy would be found alive, even though his sister might have died In the face of the most discouraging reports, she kept her faith alive week after week, and had found considerable comfort in talking to the wife of Pilot Graves, who also felt that her husband, one of the most skilled of pilots and who had weathered many storms without accident would be found alive in some isolated mountain shack

Flew Over Scene.

Mr. Tracy, grandfather of Tracy and Mary Lou, said today that at one time he and his daughter had flown over the place where the wreckage was found, not knowing that hundreds of feet below lay the bodies of their children and grandchildren

Mr Tracy said that definite arrangements have been made for return of the bodies and that Mrs Dirlam and his son would await release of the bodies by federal authorities

Besides the Dirlams, the plane carried Capt Graves, whose home was in Palo Alto C W Wallace, co-pilot, Tuscon Ariz Martha M Wilson stewardess Philadelphia H M Salisbury, first officer for TWA, Victor Krause Kansas City Mo; L B Walts, Bieber, Cal., and his wife

Young Dirlam was a senior at Leland Stanford university at Palo Alto and when his class graduated this month his name was carried on the roster of graduates His sister was a sophomore at the university Both were home during the Christmas vacation.

BUSINESS GIRL—1938 MODEL—Office manager Olive Tucker keeps disarmingly calm despite nerve-nagging phones, buzzers, interviews. "If anyone needs healthy nerves, I do," Miss Tucker smiles, adding: "That's one reason why I smoke Camels regularly. They never get my nerves upset." Later—much later—Miss Tucker skips to the roof-top gym for a quick work-out. A shower—a rub—a Camel—and she's off again! Tired? Miss Tucker's answer: "Camels give my energy a refreshing 'lift.'"

WELKER COCHRAN, who has won many important championships at billiards, voices his choice among cigarettes: "Camels give me real smoking pleasure. Under the strain of a championship match, Camels never make me feel jittery or unsure. 'I'd walk a mile for a Camel!'"

JOE DI MAGGIO, idol of baseball fans, speaks for millions of smokers when he comments on his favorite cigarette: "I'm a steady smoker, and Camels don't irritate my throat That shows Camels have real mildness all right. Watch the ball players pull out Camels!"

CIGARETTES MAY LOOK ALIKE—BUT WHAT AN APPEALING DIFFERENCE THERE IS IN CAMELS!

As a smoker, you'll be interested to read what Miss Tucker, successful young office manager, said to Miss MacGregor about the difference between Camels and other cigarettes (below)

"Olive, do you always serve Camels because you feel that there's a big difference between Camels and other cigarettes?"
"I'm very glad you've brought that question up, Helen. I've tried as many kinds of cigarettes as most people have, I guess, and I'm amazed at how different Camels are. Camels are extra-mild—they never bother my throat at all! And Camels taste so good and rich, yet they never leave me with that 'cigaretty' after-taste Really, in so many ways, Camels agree with me."

OLD MAN BUSINESS licked for another day, Miss Tucker entertains dinner guests—thoughtfully! There are lots of Camel cigarettes around her living room. Miss Tucker observes: "Camels are the favorite with my guests and are delightful for topping off a meal. During and after dining, I smoke Camels 'for digestion's sake.' Camels set me right!"

PEOPLE DO APPRECIATE THE COSTLIER TOBACCOS IN CAMELS
THEY ARE THE LARGEST-SELLING CIGARETTE IN AMERICA

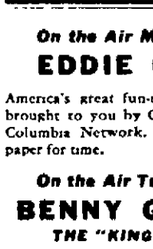
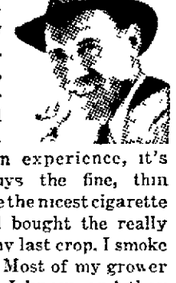
ONE SMOKER TELLS ANOTHER "CAMELS AGREE WITH ME!"

"You bet Camel is our choice in cigarettes"

say these tobacco planters —and they know tobacco because they grow it!



"I know just what tobaccos the cigarette companies buy at the auctions," says Mr. John Durham, Jr., well-known planter. "One year after another, I've seen Camel buyers take the finest grades in the market —the best of my own crops and those of my friends. They took the best part of my last crop too Better tobaccos make better smoking, as anyone that grows tobacco knows. So, like most other planters, I smoke Camels. I know the quality tobacco that's in them!"



"There's quite a difference between fine tobacco and ordinary grades," says Mr. Calvin Wiggins, who has sold tobacco to Camel for 20 years. "From my own experience, it's Camel who buys the fine, thin leaves that make the nicest cigarette smoking. Camel bought the really fine baskets of my last crop. I smoke Camels, myself. Most of my grower friends do too. I know, and they know, Camel uses costlier tobaccos!"

OHIO A. F. OF L. MAPS STAND ON STATE ELECTION

Union Expected to Fight Any Candidate Bidding for Backing of CIO.

(By United Press)

COLUMBUS—The Ohio Federation of Labor, although not endorsing any candidate for state office, was expected today to throw its influence against any candidate courting the favor of the rival committee for industrial organization.

Approximately 700 delegates to the A. F. of L.'s "non-partisan" political conference Sunday were told by Francis J. Dillon, personal representative of William Green, president of the A. F. of L., that the meeting "could properly be termed the Ohio Funeral for the CIO."

No Endorsements.

The convention voted to continue its policy of working politically within the framework of existing parties and refrained from endorsing candidates. Secretary Thomas J. Donnelly indicated that endorsements, if any, would be voted by local units.

In a declaration of principles, the convention agreed that the O. F. of L. "is prepared to assume its responsibility in all matters affecting it, and particularly in respect to good faith in the execution of contracts entered into as a result of collective bargaining."

It approved a policy of support palitically for "those who have shown a friendliness to the must and national demands of labor."

Speakers referred to CIO election defeats and politicians that to solicit CIO support "is to court defeat."

A sugestion by Fred Hock, Cincinnati representative of building trades unions, that Gov. Martin L. Davey be invited to address the convention was ruled out of order after mention of the governor's name brought boos and cheers.

The convention voted support, however, for legislation embodying the governor's proposed $5,000,000 welfare institution building program.

Although opposed to the sales tax, delegates approved a resolution opposing attempts at its repeal this year. Opposition was renewed to a proposed constitutional amendment for appointment rather than election of state supreme court and appellate court judges.

An 18-point legislative program was unanimously approved. It urged:

An eight-hour day and 40-hour week on public works; permanent relief legislation; and enactment of a state labor relations act.

Fifty-six Mansfielders today had filed applications to take civil service examinations for Class A city positions. The examinations will be held June 29 and 30 at the city building, Atty. George Biddle, secretary of the commission, said today.

DRIVER FACES DEATH CHARGE

where Mrs. Turk's daughter is to graduate today.

Miss Kovachy's death was the third traffic fatality of the year in Mansfield and the seventh to be recorded in Richland county. At this time last year, 10 persons had lost their lives in accidents in the county.

State Toll Six.

The death of Miss Kovachy was one of six caused by traffic accidents throughout the state over the week-end. Four were in Cleveland.

According to police the collision occurred Saturday at 3:30 p. m. when Strohminger, going north on Lexington avenue, attempted to pass a large truck, also going north.

According to witnesses Strohminger swung to the left side of the road and cut back sharply ahead of the large truck. Harold Ellason, Cleveland, driver of the truck told police that the car struck the front end of his machine and then hit the Cleveland car head-on.

The impact rolled the Kovachy car over, pinning all five occupants in it. They were extricated by motorists and police, who had to rip open the top of the machine.

Police said the car was thrown 60 feet by the force of the crash. The other car they said, travelled 78 feet down the road and skidded into a driveway and was headed the opposite direction from which it had been traveling.

At the hospital Saturday, young Turk told police that his mother was driving and that they were traveling at a moderate rate of speed.

"I was sitting in the front seat and I saw the other car coming down the road at a terrific rate of speed," he told the officer. "There was a crash and that's all I remember."

When police arrived at the scene of the collision, the occupants of the Mansfield car had fled, leaving behind them three bottles of beer in the car, Police Chief Meade K. Bates said. Two empty bottles were found near the machine, Bates said.

The two picked up near the accident were Paul F. Hieneking, 18, of 218 Newman street and Emmett Null, no address. Null was taken into custody when pointed out by witnesses as one of the passengers. Hieneking was found in a ditch in a field a block from the accident scene after a half hour search, officers said.

Four hours later, Strohminger was brought to headquarters by his parents. He is held in the county jail without bond pending his arraignment in municipal court tomorrow.

In a Sunday morning accident in Mansfield, Herbert Fraley, 20, R. D. 4, was slightly injured when the truck in which he was riding as a passenger, collided with an automobile driven by Peter Rabel, 189 Orange street. The accident occurred on North Mulberry street.

Two persons were hurt near Savannah, north of Ashland yesterday, when cars driven by Harold Stover, 21 Savannah, and Marcus Henderson near Ashland collided on Route 250. Stover and his brother, George 27, were injured, the former seriously, and both are in Samaritan hospital at Ashland. Neither Henderson nor Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Hammel, Ashland, riding in the Stover car, were hurt.

BREAD STRIKE ENDS

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Deliveries of bread in southwestern Pennsylvania returned to normal today, ending a bread shortage as the result of the settlement of a 10 day strike that closed 35 major bakeries and left 3,800 employes idle.

STILL HOPEFUL

Woman Flier Thinks Amelia Earhart May Be Alive.

NEW YORK—(INS)—A bare possibility that Amelia Earhart, American aviatrix lost a year ago, may still be alive, was expressed today by Jacqueline Cochran, noted woman flier.

"It is a pretty long time since she disappeared to say Amelia Earhart is alive, but I do think that if the Gilbert group of islands were minutely searched there is a possibility that the wreckage of her plane—if not the plane itself—might be found," Miss Cochran declared, adding:

"And there is a possibility that she might be found alive, even today."

Miss Earhart and her navigator, Fred Noonan, never were heard from after a 2,700 mile hop from New Guinea to tiny Howland island, in the Pacific.

$30,000 ANNEX PLANS APPROVED

Shelby Lutheran Church to Erect Three-Story Addition to Include Auditorium.

SHELBY—Plans were approved Sunday for the $30,000 addition to the First Lutheran church at a called session of the congregation at the church, church officials said today.

The plans, presented by H. C. Brokaw, building committee member, called for a three-story building to be erected east of the present edifice. The ground floor would consist of a combination auditorium, dining hall and assembling hall seating approximately 450 persons.

The first floor would provide for additional class rooms, assembly room, and ladies' parlor. On the top story would be seven regular class rooms and two assembly rooms. Cloak rooms would be located on all the floors.

The project will be started within several months if $15,000 can be raised by pledges and donations by that time, church officials stated. Preliminary legislation had been approved by the church council prior to the final approval given by the congregation Sunday.

CANDIDATES PAY COUNTY $465 IN FILING CHARGES

Seven Congressional Aspirants Post $350 to Get Names on Primary Ballot.

With the dust of campaign filing cleared away, the Richland county board of elections checked its 1938 business today and found that it did more work for less money than in recent election years.

The candidates for congress saved the day for the election board, each of seven who filed contributing $50 to the county coffers. The total collected for the year so far is $465.

The greater part of the 200 petitions handled by the board were for central committee posts and brought no revenue to the county, Walter Underwood, deputy clerk, explained.

Must Get Salary.

Only candidates for offices which pay salaries are required under the state law to pay filing fees, and the fee in such cases is one-half of one per cent of the annual salary. Funds collected from candidates go into the county general fund.

Because the office of congressman pays $10,000 a year, the highest in the district, the filing fee for that office is the most that can be collected by the election board.

There was only one petition filed for county auditor, which requires a $20.75 filing fee. There were two for county commissioner at $13.50 each, and four for county representative at $10 each.

Because the Richland county election board is the largest of any of the six in the 17th congressional district, all candidates for offices in the district must file in Mansfield.

Twenty boys attended the opening session this morning of the Y. M. C. A. summer camp on a 25-acre tract of land two miles west of the city on the Park avenue west road, near Home road.

The camp will be open every day but Sunday, and in case of rain the camp program will be carried on in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium. The first of the camp's swimming and life saving classes will be held at 9 a. m. Tuesday at the Liberty park pool. Boys signed for the class will go direct to the park.

Registrations for the camp are still open at the Y. M. C. A. office, Chapman said.

Auto Accident, Intoxication Leads Them to Jail.

Four Mansfielders, including a married couple, who figured in an automobile accident late Saturday near Alta, were in the county jail today serving out fines for intoxication.

His wife, Mrs. Evelyn Baker, 43; Walter Weber, 41, of 270 Park avenue east, and Charles McMillin, 41, same address, were fined $10 each on the same count.

U. S. FINDS CROP FUTURE BRIGHT

Record Wheat Harvest Predicted; Western Farmers Rejoice.

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Prospects for early crops were described by the agriculture department today as better than in any spring since 1929.

A record wheat crop is indicated. Conditions have been favorable for cotton and tobacco. Corn planting got off to a late start because of wet weather but the crop is progressing and normal weather would assure a good harvest.

Western farmers and stockmen are rejoicing over the best moisture conditions in years. The milk supply is larger in proportion to the national population than at any time in the last 13 years.

morning, the commissioners consented to renew the lease on the relief headquarters July 1 providing the rent is paid from the $5,000 the county receives monthly from the state for relief purposes.

The rent will be deducted from the allocation before funds are distributed to the city and townships, C L. Mitchell, chairman of the board of commissioners, said. The building is leased from Mrs Della Berger, Mansfield.

Since December, 1935, when the Orange street location was leased, the county has paid the rent from its general fund, Mitchell said. In March, however, the administration of relief was turned over to the city and townships, with the county serving only as a medium for distributing the state's contribution.

A Farmer's Diary

By Calvin A. Byers

BETWEEN showers I took my hatchet and the wheelbarrow and went out to get stakes for my early tomatoes I followed along the furrows where the blackberry blossoms of a week ago had given place to the first elderberry sprays.

At the southern edge of the woods, a wagon road leads through a leafy arch in to the heart of a clearing where loggers cut and haul out logs last winter. Along this winding trail, I wheeled my barrow seeking a place where fallen and uncut tops of trees would furnish slim stakes less than two inches in diameter.

At a spot where cord wood had been cut and piled in ranks. I found plenty of brush with small branches such as I desired A few blows with the hatchet made them into four or five-foot lengths And I began to load my wheelbarrow.

The cleared place was a hundred yards or more across, with here and there a few slender, very tall, young trees still left uncut These will grow faster, now that their larger and more older companions are gone. The twisted trunk of an old beech was left too crooked to be of value. When I had worked until I was tired, I sat down for a little while on the fallen giant and mopped my face.

The mosquitoes were bad. A swampy place nearby had furnished them breeding grounds. I noticed the jointed violets loaded with purplish green pods —I broke one open and admired the knot of white seeds, like polished pearls They will be black a little later.

Among the violets at my feet, the seedling elm and beeches of one and two years growth gave prophecy for the future — of prone trunks, of fresh-cut flying chips, the odor of bleeding wood, and of tomato sticks for a man's great-grand-children.

When I had cut a few more than a hundred sticks, I swatted the last of the mosquitoes, picked up the handles of my carrier and went back across the open field, slowly, for the ground was soft Once the wheel dropped into hole and I almost lost the entire load whose tops had been sheared off by the plane before it crashed.

Collier reported that the luxury liner, lost in the storm and flying blindly, had struck the peak squarely with such terrific impact that the fuselage had exploded into bits. Pieces of the wreckage were scattered for hundreds of feet and bodies were thrown over a wide area.

"I climbed among the wreckage," Collier told an International News Service reporter "It was horrible The plane must have struck the mountain at full speed and with terrific force Bodies were scattered right and left I counted eight or nine bodies They were unrecognizable, in pretty bad condition from the wreck and exposure. Everyone must have died instantly"

Due to Get $1,000 Reward.

Young Collier's search was filled with mishaps and danger. He left Fresno last Tuesday, stocked up with supplies at Yosemite and started alone and afoot into the wild and treacherous mountains Once he fell into a creek and lost his shoes and stockings and had to walk barefoot back to Yosemite, but he stubbornly continued the search, which ended yesterday. For his efforts he probably will receive the $1,000 reward offered by the TWA company

His discovery of the wreckage solved the mystery of the plane's fate which has been shrouded by the snows of the High Sierra Nevadas for more than three months

Hundreds of natives in that district had taken part in the search for the plane and the company sent out searching planes daily for weeks after the tragedy in a futile attempt to locate the wreckage.

The Dirlam family, especially the mother, had never given up hope that by some miracle the children might be found alive. She had a feeling, she told relatives, that Tracy would be found alive, even though his sister might have died. In the face of the most discouraging reports, she kept her faith alive week after week, and had found considerable comfort in talking to the wife of Pilot Graves, who also felt that her husband, one of the most skilled of pilots and who had weathered many storms without accident, would be found alive in some isolated mountain shack.

Flew Over Scene.

Mr. Tracy, grandfather of Tracy and Mary Lou, said today that at one time he and his daughter had flown over the place where the wreckage was found, not knowing that hundreds of feet below lay the bodies of their children and grandchildren

Mr Tracy said that definite arrangements have been made for return of the bodies and that Mrs Dirlam and his son would await release of the bodies by federal authorities.

Besides the Dirlams, the plane carried Capt. Graves, whose home was in Palo Alto; C W Wallace, co-pilot, Tuscon Ariz, Martha M Wilson, stewardess, Philadelphia; H M. Salisbury first officer for TWA, Victor Krause, Kansas City Mo, L B Walts Bieber, Cal., and his wife

Young Dirlam was a senior at Leland Stanford university at Palo Alto and when his class graduated this month his name was carried on the roster of graduates. His sister was a sophomore at the university Both were home during the Christmas vacation.

BUSINESS GIRL—1938 MODEL—Office manager Olive Tucker keeps disarmingly calm despite nerve-nagging phones, buzzers, interviews. "If anyone needs healthy nerves, I do," Miss Tucker smiles, adding: "That's one reason why I smoke Camels regularly. They never get my nerves upset." Later—much later—Miss Tucker skips to the roof-top gym for a quick work-out. A shower—a rub—a Camel—and she's off again! Tired? Miss Tucker's answer: "Camels give my energy a refreshing 'lift.'"

WELKER COCHRAN, who has won many important championships at billiards, voices his choice among cigarettes: "Camels give me real smoking pleasure. Under the strain of a championship match, Camels never make me feel jittery or unsure. 'I'd walk a mile for a Camel!'"

JOE DI MAGGIO, idol of baseball fans, speaks for millions of smokers when he comments on his favorite cigarette: "I'm a steady smoker, and Camels don't irritate my throat. That shows Camels have real mildness all right. Watch the ball players pull out Camels!"

CIGARETTES MAY LOOK ALIKE—BUT WHAT AN APPEALING DIFFERENCE THERE IS IN CAMELS!

As a smoker, you'll be interested to read what Miss Tucker, successful young office manager, said to Miss MacGregor about the difference between Camels and other cigarettes (below)

"Olive, do you always serve Camels because you feel that there's a big difference between Camels and other cigarettes?"
"I'm very glad you've brought that question up, Helen. I've tried as many kinds of cigarettes as most people have, I guess, and I'm amazed at how different Camels are. Camels are extra-mild—they never bother my throat at all! And Camels taste so good and rich, yet they never leave me with that 'cigaretty' after-taste. Really, in so many ways, Camels agree with me."

OLD MAN BUSINESS licked for another day, Miss Tucker entertains dinner guests—thoughtfully! There are lots of Camel cigarettes around her living room. Miss Tucker observes: "Camels are the favorite with my guests and are delightful for topping off a meal. During and after dining, I smoke Camels 'for digestion's sake.' Camels set me right!"

PEOPLE DO APPRECIATE THE COSTLIER TOBACCOS IN CAMELS
THEY ARE THE LARGEST-SELLING CIGARETTE IN AMERICA

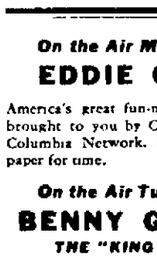
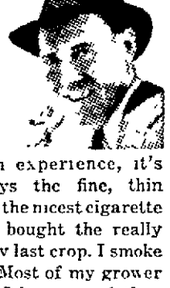
ONE SMOKER TELLS ANOTHER "CAMELS AGREE WITH ME!"

"You bet Camel is our choice in cigarettes"

say these tobacco planters —and they know tobacco because they grow it!



"I know just what tobaccos the cigarette companies buy at the auctions," says Mr. John Durham, Jr., well-known planter. "One year after another, I've seen Camel buyers take the finest grades in the market —the best of my own crops and those of my friends. They took the best part of my last crop too Better tobaccos make better smoking, as anyone that grows tobacco knows. So, like most other planters, I smoke Camels. I know the quality tobacco that's in them!"



"There's quite a difference between fine tobacco and ordinary grades," says Mr. Calvin Wiggins, who has sold tobacco to Camel for 20 years. "From my own experience, it's Camel who buys the fine, thin leaves that make the nicest cigarette smoking. Camel bought the really fine baskets of my last crop. I smoke Camels, myself. Most of my grower friends do too. I know, and they know, Camel uses costlier tobaccos!"

Flag Day Suggests Patriotism.

TOMORROW will be another Flag day—the one hundred and sixty-first anniversary of the adoption of "The Star Spangled Banner" as the flag of a new nation, the United States of America.

Twenty years ago Flag day was a solemn and widely observed occasion in Mansfield. Home town boys, and many more from this vicinity, were in camps training for war, or were already in France.

That was a time when patriotism ran high and loyalty to the flag was an assumed qualification of good citizenship—when any hint of disloyalty to the flag or to the government was not tolerated.

Then came a restoration of peace, and readjustment into the routine of everyday life in this community and throughout the nation.

And there came, also, a marked lessening of patriotic spirit, followed by a lethargic attitude in recent years toward alien influences that have sought to destroy the American form of democratic government and substitute therefor some imported "ism" that makes appeal only to the ignorant or the crackpot radicals.

For industrious and well-intentioned natives of other countries who come to the United States with the intention of obeying laws, doing some kind of necessary work, and later becoming naturalized citizens, there is a welcome and the privilege of sharing in such opportunities as now exist or that may be developed in the future.

But for those who come here as alien propagandists, with the idea that their weak mentalities have devised a better system of government than is now operative in this country, and that this government should be torn down and rebuilt to accord with some European pattern, there should be no welcome—nor should there be encouragement or tolerance.

Flag day is an admirable occasion on which to stress patriotism and strengthen Americanism.

Whatever improvements need be made in the United States—and whatever problems remain to be solved—can be best handled by AMERICANS!

Display the American flag tomorrow.

Another Traffic Fatality.

MANSFIELD has had another of those week-end traffic fatalities that must be classed as an "avoidable accident"—in reality such occurrences are NOT "accidents," they result from SOMEBODY'S carelessness, recklessness or lack of training in safe driving practices.

With the high value placed on human life, in some instances, it is strange that the needless slaughter on the highways has come to be so lightly regarded that little is done to correct conditions that cause it.

While there is a brief stir of feeling after a fatal crash such as that of Saturday afternoon, interest quickly lags and the incident is soon forgotten—except by the family and friends of those killed or crippled thereby.

Ohio's driver's license law, in effect for the past couple of years, has shown itself to be of little actual benefit in the matter of withholding driving privileges from persons physically or mentally incapable of handling a car safely. Nor has there been serious effort to deprive habitual drinkers of their "right" to drive.

Much has been done in the past few years along the line of education in safe driving and in awakening public consciousness to the dangers of careless, reckless and drunken driving—yet the indications are that this year's total of highway fatalities will exceed that of last year.

If there is to be further increase in the number of automobiles, as there doubtless will be, it is essential that more drastic policies be adopted for issuance of driver's licenses, enforcement of traffic laws and punishment of violators.

Mansfield's immediate responsibility is to provide sufficient policing to bring about stricter enforcement of traffic regulations in this city and to hereafter exercise greater care in issuing driver's licenses.

Time To Consider Candidates.

NOW that the lists for the August primaries are complete, time will be given for voters in each of the parties to acquaint themselves with qualifications and past records of candidates for various public offices to be filled at the November election.

This year's election is important. Not only is a governor, and other state officials to be chosen, but a United States senator is to be elected, also a congressman from this district.

The men elected in November can be no better than those nominated in August. Responsibility rests on the voters of each party to participate in the August primaries, so that nominations may go to men who are regarded as most likely to give creditable service if elected to the office to which they aspire.

Where there has been a record of past performance in public office, as is the case in several of the primary contests, this may be regarded as a fairly safe criterion of what might be expected in the future.

In county contests it is a quite simple matter for each voter to satisfy himself as to the relative merits of contenders. In district or state contests this is not so easy, yet it is quite possible for interested voters to learn something of the record of each of the candidates, as well as his reputation and standing in his own community, where he is naturally best known.

It should be very generally realized, by now, that mere itch for public office cannot be safely accepted as an indication that the individual is in any way qualified for the position to which he aspires, or that he could be safely entrusted with such responsibilities.

Democrats and Republicans should do all within their power to make sure that candidates nominated at the August primaries are men to whom they can point with pride rather than blush from shame.

It is in Hollywood, of course, that a divorced husband agrees to pay his ex-wife $1,400 a month "as long as he earns $3,000 a week"—which is one of those little things that confuse high school graduates.

Keeping Step

—By LESLIE EICHEL

OUR ASTUTE political observer at Harrisburg, J. W. Theis, sends us this dispatch on the Pennsylvania political situation:

Slow to heal are Pennsylvania's Democratic primary wounds, too slow today for the comfort of party leaders as they eyed the Democratic state committee meeting here on June 14.

Two recent developments focused attention anew on efforts to reweld the opposing factions headed by State Chairman David L. Lawrence and Senator Joseph F. Guffey, who split violently during the primary campaign. They were:

1. Senator Guffey's announcement of a "rump" meeting of all 67 county chairmen who led his unsuccessful fight to have Lieut. Gov. Thomas Kennedy, CIO official, win the Democratic gubernatorial nomination. The meeting was called for June 13, night before the state committee session, and was to be followed by a second conference after the state organization sitting.

2. Gov. George H. Earle's surprise announcement that he would be in Texas—fishing and attending a governors' safety conference—at the time of the state committee meeting. And, then, his equally sudden decision not to go to Texas, but to attend the meeting.

GUFFEY—THE KEY

Guffey, who told Washington reporters he would be in the Democratic "front line trenches" in November, and then in letters to Kennedy leaders repudiated his statement, held the key to the political dilemma. But his efforts toward peace are believed to have gone a long way, especially since he called a meeting in Washington the other night of various party factions.

Interpretations of Guffey's post-primary maneuvers varied, but all recognized the evidence of his determination to salvage as much as possible from the primary results. Kennedy and the entire Guffey-CIO ticket were defeated by the slate sponsored by Lawrence and the state committee.

Some observers saw Guffey's latest stand as a formal "face-saving" gesture directed to those who lost with him in the May 17 election.

Others took the leader who formerly was called Pennsylvania's "No. 1 Democrat" more seriously—saw in his meeting plans a resolution to hold his insurgent band together, for whatever it might gain.

HARMONY NECESSARY

As an eleventh-hour threat to Democratic harmony—and Democartic leaders concede they must have harmony to win in November—the Guffey tactics have caused real concern in the organization camp. Guffeyites reportedly have demanded an equal share in the state organization leadership and removal of Matthew H. McCloskey, jr., Philadelphia contractor, as chairman of the Democratic finance committee as major terms in the harmony "deal." Up to this point, Lawrence is said to have opposed such conditions, although McCloskey's resignation is expected to be achieved ultimately. He was the chief target of insurgent Democrats and Republicans in the primary campaign as an alleged "contractor-boss."

EARLE'S ATTITUDE

Governor Earle, who won the Democratic senatorial nomination "hands down," risked the loss of CIO support last month when he endorsed the Democratic organization slate of which he was a member. During the campaign, he mildly denounced John L. Lewis for interfering in the Pennsylvania political picture, but since has declined to comment on the CIO chieftain's place in the autumn campaign.

He, however, canceled an invitation of Gov. James V. Allred of Texas to speak at Ft. Worth June 15, in order to be present for the Democratic state committee meeting June 14. Thus it was considered probable that he might make a forthright declaration concerning Lewis.

Roosevelt 'Goes to the Country'

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON—President Roosevelt's adverse critics are bitterly resentful of his administration's support of New Deal candidates for the senate and house of representatives in the current year's campaign.

But such support is not unprecedented.

If ever an executive chief made a strong bid for legislative support President Wilson did when he appealed to the voters to give him the kind of congress he wanted to enable him to put his post-World war program through.

The voters did not do it in Wilson's case, to be sure.

NOTHING NEW

Possibly (judging from President Wilson's experience) it is questionable whether or not a White House tenant is wise in electioneering for a majority of his choosing on Capitol Hill.

It is not necessarily dictatorial, either.

England is as democratic a country as ever was, and its administrations regularly appeal to the voters, over parliament's head, whenever the lawmakers turn adamustratively balky. Sometimes the administration wins and sometimes not.

In a way, it is a system which insures a speedier popular response than our own, concerning pending national issues. We get our verdicts only at stated intervals. The English have an election whenever one is needed.

"GOING TO THE COUNTRY"

It's a system which Woodrow Wilson believed in, as primitively democratic.

Adapting it as well as he could (which unavoidably was clumsily) to our constitution, he tried it here—and got licked.

Americans were not accustomed to "going to the country."

And neither was President Wilson—except theoretically. He thought that "going to the country" meant an administrative victory. In England it frequently does not. But English statesmen are used to such upsets. On this side of the Atlantic it was a shock.

SPEAKS IN KENTUCKY

Nevertheless President Roosevelt is taking his chances.

After attending the marriage of his son, John, to Anne Lindsay Clark at Nahant, Mass., June 18, and the anniversary of the Swedes' first American landing at Wilmington, Del., he will make two New York speeches June 30. Will they be political? They will.

July 8. Presidential speech at Marietta, O., celebrating the 150th anniversary of the opening of the Northwest territory.

July 8. Presidential speech at Covington, Ky. (afternoon of the same day), undoubtedly to aid the campaign of Senator Alben W. Barkley, senate majority leader, in fight for renomination against Gov. A. B. (Happy) Chandler.

July 9. Presidential speech at Paducah, Ky., home town of Senator Barkley.

Stops at Memphis, Tenn., for a TVA talk, and at Oklahoma City, to speak, presumably, in behalf of Senator Elmer Thomas, who is having a hard renomination fight.

July 10. Presidential speech at Grand River dam, near Tulsa, Okla.

OTHER SPEECHES

Scattered through, but not yet definitely stated, are presidential speeches in the Muskingum Conservation District, near New Philadelphia, O.; Ft. Worth and Denison, Tex., Pueblo, Col., and in Nevada and Utah, somewhere and somewhen.

After that the president will start on his west coast South American voyage.

On this voyage he expects to visit Bogota, Colombia; Quito, Equador; Lima, Peru, and Santiago, Chile—not to mention Panama, coming back. All these capitals are inland, except Lima. This will involve some "routing."

Bolivia is pretty close to the coast, too. It will feel slighted if the president fails to make an inland trip to its capital—La Paz. As a matter of fact, Bolivia has twin capitals, but Sucre is too internal to be bothered with.

Favors New Court House.

Editor News-Journal:

Several months ago, when the petition bearing the names of many citizens asking for an elevator in the court house, was presented, the county commissioners answered that government money could not be forthcoming because too small a portion of the cost would go to labor; now it appears that a new court house for Richland county would be in order and that the federal government could be expected to raise 45 per cent of the cost if the county could raise the other 55 per cent.

The present structure was built around 1870, was remodelled some years later and is entirely inadequate for 1938 and the years to come. The probate and court of appeals court rooms have been converted into offices for state and federal examiners; even the corridors are used for offices and the county superintendent of schools has his at the west end of the third floor corridor; the department for aid to dependent children is housed on the fourth floor and is almost inaccessible; storage space for records is at a premium; the prosecutor's office is located in a private building; the National Re-Employment office is located elsewhere; the Red Cross should have space in the court house but there is no room; there is no assembly room to meet recurring requests for public meetings.

Just go to the court house to transact business and find out for yourself. The stairs are almost endless and tricky, endangering those who must climb them; the court room requires artificial light at all times and is separated from the clerk's office and the sheriff's office; other offices which should be connected, such as auditor and treasurer, engineer and commissioners, are across halls or on different floors. The need for a new structure is certain.

Canton and other county seat cities are already in line for new court houses; the question is: Shall Richland county get its share of federal funds now that they are available? We surely are not too poor to pay our share; in 1926 the county was indebted two million dollars and now it owes less than $200,000. Here is a chance to get a commodious and serviceable public building and put a lot of folks to work who might otherwise be headed toward public relief.

GEORGE W. BIDDLE

Editor News-Journal:

The United States has had six years of experience with the "New Deal", as a practical philosophy of government, and while it is unfair to say it is wholly wrong, it is fairly accurate to say it is too expensive for the small good it has brought the nation. The student of political history is able to see in New Deal theories a striking analogy with Ancient Rome, in the period of Diocletia, or in other words, "Rome in the decline".

The primaries in Iowa and Pennsylvania definitely show a rebuke to Washington. There is plain evidence, that the states (particularly northern states) are becoming resentful of the usurpation of executive powers, by the president. The truth is, folk want to know whether the nation is to be run "politically", or "institutionally". There is a vast difference, between the bi-partisan system, and the self-perpetuating regime, which is subtly being superimposed on our society, by the Washington government. Roosevelt promised a 25% reduction in the cost of government and the budget will be balanced." Well, if it is proper to increase the national debt by $20,000,000,000, and multiply bureaus requiring increased taxes, as a means of lowering governmental debts; or, if the nation can grow richer, by borrowing and spending, as a wastral—if this is the way to "balance the budget", then we who think we are normal certainly must be wrong.

The only safe path for this nation is to banish from Washington every fragment of new dealism, and send to the congress representatives and senators who are known to be friends of the Constitution, men who will say to the executive department, "Hands off, this is our job, and we will discharge our oath of office."

Let us return to sanity in government and cease following cunningly devised fables.

Trim It Down!

The only hope of the homefolk about the spending prospects for another year is this—that the figures will look as big to the people at the national capital as they look out here in the middle West.

Admittedly that is a slim chance. Nothing much has come of it before. But this time the statistics are so towering that the feeling exists they cannot stand up finally at their full height. Then a few of them are tentative and perhaps something will be realized on second thought.

But for the present there are indicated appropriations running to more than 12 billion dollars and reaching a peace-time peak for the nation. If they should go through and the money actually should be distributed in the twelve months beginning July 1, the deficit alone would amount to more than 6 billion dollars—itself enough to run the government a full year and a half no further back than 1930.

It's incredible yet there it is as a possibility. Will somebody in an influential position of authority at last wake up to the stupendous futility, waste and danger of it?—Kansas City Times.

How It Started

—By JEAN NEWTON

"Not Worth a Rap".

"Not worth a rap" is not slang. It is perfectly legitimate language, though frequently used figuratively in reference to things that are valueless.

The allusion is to an eighteenth century Irish coin called a rap equivalent to about half an American cent, that is, before our money was devalued.

Even this bit of change was not safe from counterfeiters, for we find Jonathan Swift writing in his Drapier's Letters:

"Copper half-pence or farthings have been for some time very scarce and many counterfeits passed about under the name of raps."

There may be an as yet unestablished link between the "rap" of Erin and the German rappe, a base copper coin current on the continent during the fourteenth century; credit for the popularity of the expression "not worth a rap," however, is undoubtedly due to its Irish connection.

Young America Says---

We Must Make Our Own Lucky Breaks.

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

DOES LUCK JUST HAPPEN?

Most Young Americans believe it does . . . look with envious eyes on the chap who "always gets the good breaks" . . . go into Self-Pitying Blues "because nothing ever comes their way!"

But here's spunky little Loleta Williams of Floyd, Va. Loleta has spent only seventeen years in this muddled world, but already she's wise to one lasting truth — "LIFE IS WHAT YOU MAKE IT."

"Dear Elsie—

"Every day you hear someone moaning, 'I never get a chance! Didja hear about Tom getting that swell job? Gosh, that fellow's lucky!...Wish I had his breaks.'

"LUCKY BREAKS? Bah! There's no such things. The fellows and girls who get the 'swell jobs,' GET THEM BECAUSE THEY WORK FOR THEM.... BECAUSE THEY WERE READY TO TAKE THEM WHEN THE OPPORTUNITY CAME ALONG.

"These 'fortunate' Toms whom we envy so much weren't always that way. Most of them started as poor kids, who paid their own way almost from babyhood. While the other kids were playing around, they were grinding away on the farm or in some shop.... denying themselves pleasure.... and getting called 'sissies' because they wouldn't dance or chase or drink.

"But the older men with jobs to give, didn't call them sissies. They were looking for boys or girls like that—kids that had proven their stuff. And so Tom got the chance and the others are still moaning about their bad luck.

"TAKE A TIP FROM ME, YOUNG AMERICA. IF WE WANT LUCK WE'LL HAVE TO CUT OUT OUR DAY-DREAMS AND NIGHT-LIFE CAPERINGS...GET RID OF OUR LAZINESS AND SELF-PITY...AND MAKE OUR OWN LUCKY BREAKS. FOR THEY ARE THE ONLY KIND THERE ARE."

HERE'S another Young American equally wise—Richard F. Kratochwill of Mazomanie, Wis. "Dear Miss Robinson—

"I've spent two years in a large university and I think I've discovered one fact:

"THE TWO 'EVILS' FOR WHICH YOUTH IS MOST CRITICIZED ARE SEX AND DRINK. AND IN BOTH CASES, CONTROL SHOULD BE TAUGHT IN THE HOME.

"Sex isn't an evil in itself; it's natural, and should be beautiful and sacred. But most parents shrink from telling their children the facts of life. They act as if it were a dirty secret. They drift along until the kid gets into high school and gets the idea that 'you've gotta know the answers.' Then, when he gets into some jam, they yell to high heaven.

"BUT WHY DIDN'T THEY TELL HIM THE TRUTH AND TEACH HIM THE NECESSITY OF CONTROL AT THE RIGHT TIME?

"The same is true of drinking. I don't believe in actual Prohibition, but I do believe in temperance. BUT IT MUST BE TAUGHT IN THE HOME. Sex and drink are ruining Young America. BUT THE PARENTS SHOULD BE BROUGHT TO THE BAR WITH THE YOUNGSTERS. THEY ARE EQUALLY TO BLAME."

THIS seems to be a general reformation day—for here comes 14-year-old David Kessler of Devils Lake, N. D., with a smacking earful of wisdom for friend Ed Conly who recently criticized our high schools. Says he:

"Let me tell you something, Ed. YOU GET JUST AS MUCH OUT OF ANYTHING AS YOU PUT INTO IT. You say that your school system has not taught you to spell, speak, write, punctuate or do simple arithmetic corectly. I'm willing to wager that if you look back through your old text books, you will find that they contain a complete course in all those things you say you've missed.

The trouble is, YOU have not made the most of YOUR opportunity. Don't kid yourself, Ed—Uncle Sam's educational system is not lacking in adaptedness. YOU are! Don't belittle the school system of the United States, Ed. The knowledge was there. YOU dndn't absorb it."

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—Perhaps it was because of the contented look on the faces of their customers. . . . Or maybe they were making so much money they were compelled to look about for new responsibilities. . . . Nevertheless, such a wave of domesticity has swept over La Conga that now nobody, least of all themselves, knows where it will end.

There were the three owners, Bobby Martyn, Oscar Roche and Miguel Roldan. There was Gloria Font, the little cigaret girl. And there was Dorothy Ross, the press-agent and wife of a New York newspaperman.

So La Conga opened, became a major stop along the carriage trade route, and then things began to happen, in this order:

1. Weary of bachelorhood Bobby Martyn took himself a wife.

2. Then the 2nd associate, Oscar Roche, walked in one night and announced, beaming, that the fence wasn't the only thing running around his house. He had a fine young son.

3. Shortly thereafter Mrs. Ross became the mother of a son, too.

4. Meanwhile, only Miguel Roldan remained a bachelor among the three associates. So he convinced Gloria Font, the little cigaret girl, that single status wasn't so good after all. Down to the City Hall for a license went they, then over to a magistrate's chambers, where they were married.

Verily La Conga, which epitomizes sophisticated after dark entertainment in New York, is knee-deep in rice and rattles.

But you gotta have savvy. . . . You gotta know when to cruise and when not to cruise. . . . You gotta know for a fact a man wants a hack, and then you slow down for him. . . . How do I know? . . . Don't ask me. . . . But that's what I calls having hack savvy. . . . I can always tell when a man is about to make up his mind to get in a hack. . . . With folks tipping short, I likes the long hauls. . . . From Times Square to the Bronx. . . . From Washington Square to the Yankee Stadium. . . . It's them long hauls that pays the freight. . . . But I hates them Brooklyn tricks. . . . Man, I hates going to Brooklyn. . . . Dunno why it is but I never been there in m'life without getting plum lost."

KICKING AROUND: Kay Kyser, the Rocky Mount, N. C., boy, comes back to town, to the Pennsylvania. . . . It's the first time I've seen him since Valley Dale, at Columbus, seven years ago, but he looks the same. . . . I don't suppose he will ever change; same warm grin, same infectious good nature, same old Kay. . . . He is smarter now, and more successful, but it hasn't changed his ways or his manner. . . . Kyser doesn't weigh a pound more than he did when he was kicking around the campus of the U. of N. C.

Red Ramblers

—By HELEN LOOMIS LINHAM

I have seen blooms in valleys dim and cool
Where silent feet across green
ferny places
Came suddenly upon the crimson pool
Of roses sweet, where only sunlight laces
Through the trees at noonday, and I know
The velvet loveliness of roses
white
Against the emerald green of hills, where snow
Topped peaks rise swiftly, blindly to the light.
I have seen roses yellow as the hue
Of buttercups, in meadows in the sun;
Waxy and shining in the grass and dew;
Roses, to please the heart of anyone!
But Ramblers climbing a latticed, whitened wall,
I think are quite the loveliest
of all.

Diagnostic Clinic Reveals 8 New Cases in County.

Eight new cases of tuberculosis have been found in Richland county, a report of the monthly diagnostic chest clinic which was held last Friday under the direction of Dr T. L. Bliss of Akron, showed today.

Of the 28 suspects examined, eight showed a positive test while 20 proved negative. Three of the positive cases were from Mansfield, three were re-check cases, while the other two were from the county.

Dr. Roy C. Rehder, city-county health commissioner said that the eight brings the total number of new cases discovered in the county since Jan. 1 to 53. Of the 236 suspects examined by the clinic, 181 have shown negative tests.

Two of the new cases were recommended to the county commissioners for isolation, Dr. Rehder said, while three others were recommended to be sent to a sanatorium.

A Shoe Repair Service That's Really Different—That's Nortons

West 3rd Street Shop Has Latest and Most Complete Equipment.

As up to date as today's weather—as completely equipped as the most modern factory—that in brief is a word picture of Norton's Shoe Repair Service, 46 West Third street.

For no improvement or advancement in the field of shoe repair is invented or designed that is overlooked by the Norton service.

Ever alert for better ways to serve his patrons, W. F. Norton, the proprietor, has made a study of rebuilding shoes. Although a veteran of 30 years at his trade, he constantly seeks new ideas on how shoe repairing can be improved. Just as the various products in this moderh world are improved from year to year, so Mr. Norton is convinced that the rebuilding and servicing of footwear can be bettered.

As a result he attends and participates in shoe repair clinics and conventions throughout the country; visits the shoe repair shops in the larger cities, and goes to factories where the finest footwear is manufactured—always with one idea in mind—to discover new and better methods of rebuilding shoes.

This constant driving for improvements has its rewards, too. Mr. Norton was awarded a certificate of merit for shoe rebuilding in a national exposition in Chicago several years ago. He also has received recognition at other times for the skilled work turned out by his shop.

Back of all this effort is the finest and most up to date of equipment, for no workman can turn out a job much better than the tools he has to work with. Mr. Norton spares no expense on equipment.

The average business has one stitcher for half sole work and occasionally you find shops with two, but the Norton establishment has three. One is fitted up for light and fine shoes and another for heavy work such as men's work shoes.

One has a small needle and thread which makes it possible to turn out a job that approaches closer to the factory appearance of new shoes. By using the heavier thread on heavier shoes, it makes the soles more serviceable and prevents them from ripping.

The third stitcher is a lockstitch McKay which sews on the inside of the shoe, making it possible to sew the soles on any shoe regardless of how it is built. This machine in some respects is the "trouble-shooter" of the shop and one of its prized pieces of equipment for there is no job of half soling that it can't handle.

Norton's also have complete equipment for cement work. The selection of lasts is so large that any size or shape of shoe can be fitted properly, which is essential for A-1 cementing.

An electric toe press is used to replace tips of shoes, enabling the shop to cement the tips for those patrons who desire to have their work done while they wait.

At no time does Norton's use mechanical nailers for half soling as the complete equipment makes it possible to either cement or stitch the soles of any shoe.

In addition to these stitchers, presses for cement work, the shop has various other small machines to do the fine work required on the footwear of today. As an example there is an electric shaper which takes the wrinkles out of shoes that have been stretched out of place, restoring them to their original shape.

The equipment for waiting work is also up to the minute. Seven comfortable chairs, foot stools and sanitary slippers are available for customers' convenience and comfort. The large corps of workmen makes a long wait for any job unnecessary.

The cleaning department of the shop is a business in itself. Every known facility for the proper cleaning of footwear is used and the work is done by men with years of experience and not by boys hired to shine shoes.

A large and complete supply of polishes, laces, insoles, linings, in fact everything to keep footwear looking at its best, is available at the shop.

NEW ELECTRIC DISHWASHER LAST WORD IN HOUSEHOLD APPLIANCES

"When time is taken to stop and think of the great number of jobs electricity is now doing for the modern housewife, and of the many ways in which electrical appliances are helping to make her daily work lighter, we realize that her dishwashing problem is about the only one which hasn't yet been satisfactorily answered," Joy Herbert, new business manager of the Ohio Public Service company, points out.

"And yet this modern woman, with all these proved labor savers in her home, walks out into the kitchen after each meal to do the dishes and clean up. She has to bend over the sink to do the dishes just the same way she has been doing them since she set up housekeeping, the way her grandmother and all her ancestors did the dishes before her.

"Without question there is a need in the modern home for some device to make this most monotonous and disagreeable of all household tasks both easier and more convenient for the woman."

He goes on to point out the advantages of an electric dishwasher.

"It saves time, saves money and contributes to the health of the whole family. It takes only five minutes to complete the entire operation.

"When the family is small, the dishes for the entire day can be washed at one time . . . eliminating the necessity of washing breakfast, lunch, and dinner dishes separately.

"Water at 140 degrees is used to wash the dishes in an electric dishwasher. This temperature is much too hot for the hands and it actually sterilizes the dishes as well as washing them spotlessly clean.

"The electric method of dishwashing is cleaner because there is no messy sink or dishpan, no dishrag hanging around the kitchen and clothes are not soiled from doing the dishes . . . in fact, the party dress can be worn safely in the kitchen."

Miss Lee Gives Answers to Letters

By VIRGINIA LEE

C. J. is in love for the first time. He is only 20. His girl went to work in another town, and according to his sister, she has been stepping out on him. She maintains, however, that she loves only him. He feels that she is not truthful, and yet he loves her. They argue all the time they are together.

He doesn't want to marry until he is 25, and wonders if he will be standing in her way if he keeps on going with her. She is 19

I think it would be wise to let her go with other boys and for you to go with other girls as long as you both are too young to marry for some time. You can keep on loving her, and time will tell whether she is really in love with you or not. Could you do that, being so much in love with her? In that way you wouldn't be standing in her way, for she would be free. You cannot very well check on her all the time and it only makes you unhappy when your sister tells you stories about her, so as long as you are not formally engaged (and I think you are wise to postpone such a serious step), why not both be free to go with others when you are living in different towns, and enjoy each other's society when you can be together.

D. L.: I think a girl in her teens should be friendly with boys her own age and go with them occasionally if her parents allow her to have dates. I think it is a very dangerous thing for a young girl to be talking to and going out with a man of whom she knows very little and when her parents do not know what she is doing.

So you see my solution to your problem would be for you to refuse to go out with this young man. From what you tell me, you cannot even be sure he is not married. And even if he isn't and people you know think he is, you are going to get a bad name by going with him.

WONDERING has been going out with her third cousin. Her parents did not object. "Now they think I should not go with him," she writes, "and I miss him very much. Do you think I am wrong in wanting his friendship?"

There is no reason why you should not be friendly with your cousin, Wondering. Your parents probably felt you were growing too fond of him and might want to marry, and that should be discouraged. As a matter of fact, I believe physicians agree that a marriage between third cousins is not likely to have any ill effects on the offspring.

A little cornstarch mixed with warm water and stirred into a gravy that is too thin will thicken it.

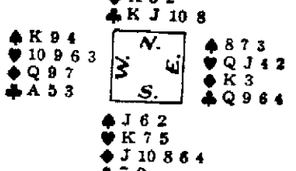
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

FOOLISH COVERING

"COVER AN honor with an honor" is a useful rule for people who cannot think. But if you can figure out the probable location of other honors and secondary cards in the suit, as you often can, you will sometimes see that covering an honor is the worst possible play, just exactly what the declarer is trying to make you do.



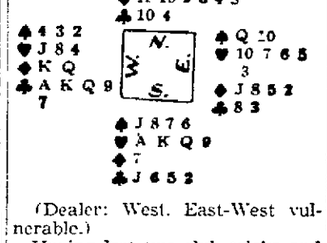
(Dealer: North. Neither side vulnerable.)

When the heart 3 was led against South's 3-No Trumps contract here, he realized that he and has partner had been rather ambitious in their bidding. North had started with 1-Spade. South responded with 1-No Trump, North called 2-Clubs, South 2-Diamonds and North 3-No Trumps.

Declarer won the first trick in the dummy to preserve his only possible entry to his hand. Then in an endeavor to cash a few diamonds, he led the 2 from dummy, which East captured with the K. The return of the heart Q was taken with the K and the diamond J offered. West handed the contract to declarer by covering this with his Q. The diamond A won and the small diamond enabled South to get back to his hand to run the remaining diamonds and finesse the spades.

West should have been able to figure that if he had allowed the diamond J to hold, the next round would have had to be won with the A and declarer would have been locked in the dummy.

Tomorrow's Problem.



(Dealer: West. East-West vulnerable.)

Having lost two club tricks and an over-ruffed club, and a heart then being led, how should North plan the balance of his play at 4-Spades?

Scorch stains on white silk can be removed with bicarbonate of soda mixed to a paste with cold water.

THEATER

If advance notices may be depended upon, "Three Comrades," opening soon in Mansfield, should be one of the better pictures of the season. This is Eric Remarque's story of three men and a girl, their friendship, the sacrifices they make for one another, and their loves and tragedies. Robert Taylor, Franchot Tone and Robert Young are the three comrades who pledge their allegiance to each other through the battles of life and Margaret Sullavan is the girl who through a chance encounter joins them. Remarque, you remember, wrote "All Quiet On The Western Front" and "The Road Back," both biting and bitter arraignment of war, and he depicts his characters in bold, sure tones.

Supplements Stage Show.

When Olsen and Johnson, nationally famous as stage and radio comics, present their new stage show at the Madison theater Tuesday and Wednesday, their show will be supplemented on the screen by the feature, "Wives Under Suspicion," with Gail Patrick and Warren William. In spite of a title which might be anything from a comedy to a tragedy, the story is highly dramatic, with William in the role of a relentless district attorney who fights for a first degree murder verdict for a gentle visionary who has killed his unfaithful wife in a moment of jealous madness. The climax comes when the prosecutor is made to see the man's motives through similar circumstances in his own life.

New Cinderella.

Until a year ago last month Arleen Whelan was a manicurist in a Hollywood barber shop at $18 a week. Now she is playing opposite Warner Baxter in "Kidnaped," with Freddie Bartholomew. Once in a blue moon does a story like Miss Whelan's happen in the film capital. An executive of 20th-Century-Fox went into the barbershop for a haircut and manicure, and the auburn-haired girl with a sprinkling of freckles carried herself with so much dignity for a girl so young that he asked her to make a screen test. As a result of that test she was cast in the leading role opposite a big star and in a few months the film city was talking of her and her future. Her father is an outdoor advertising man, and the biggest thrill of his life was the day he posted up the billboards with his daughter's name along with that of Warner Baxter. The story is Robert Louis Stevenson's thrilling tale of love and war in Scotland. It's at the Ohio.

Award Winner Returns.

The greatest picture made last year according to the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, was "The Life of Emile Zola," with Paul Muni, and many newspaper polls throughout the country showed the same verdict. The picture, shown at the Ohio a number of months ago, returns to the Majestic for re-showing Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. The picture not only won the award but Joseph Schildkraut won the prize for the best character performance given by any actor during the year. The picture deals with the life of Emile Zola, the great French writer and champion of the underdog, especially those years in which he waged a determined fight for the vindication of Gen. Dreyfus, who was framed into Devil's Island. The story is historical and biographical. Another great film, "Submarine D-1," with Pat O'Brien, Wayne Morris, George Brent, and Frank McHugh, is on the same bill.

Battling Broadway.

Girls who fight each other and fight each other's battles, who wear each other's clothes and who keep their poverty under a gay flaunting of silk hose and borrowed evening clothes, form the background of "Stage Door" which the Ritz presents today and tomorrow. Ginger Rogers, in the best screen role she has ever had, is a wisecracking and ambitious girl in a theatrical boarding house; Katharine Hepburn is the girl of wealth who comes to the boarding house to live, and Andrea Leeds is the heart-break girl who is whipped by Broadway. Miss Hepburn's curtain speech after making a hit in a new play is one of the outstanding dramatic scenes in picture history. On the same program is "Thoroughbreds Don't Cry" with Ronald Sinclair, C. Aubrey Smith, Sophie Tucker, Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland.

Sucking insects are found on the soft growing tips of plants where they bore in just like mosquitoes and suck themselves full of juices from the plant. The plant then begins to wilt. Nicotine sulphate and soap will destroy these insects. Use plenty of soap and make the nicotine stick to the body of the insect.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

AT DICKY'S sneer that he supposed I had given Katherine the information concerning his dead sister, Elizabeth, which had prompted her advice concerning Hank, I felt the absolute emptiness below my throat which means fear to me.

Not that I was afraid of his anger. I have experienced it too often in the tempestuous early years of our marriage not to be accustomed to it. But something deep within me quailed at quarreling over a dead woman.

But it was vital to Hank's welfare that the question of sending him to a specialist in neurotic complexes should be settled without delay, and fusing my resolution to white heat, I faced my irate husband steadily.

"There is no use dodging the question," I said. "You know, as well as I, why Elizabeth's children did not grieve for her. You also ought to know that were she my own sister I could not have guarded my knowledge from everyone all these years any more closely than I have done. But when Katherine told me of Hank's watching that rabbit die instead of putting it out of its misery, I knew that something must be done. I felt that if you had known, you never would have given him equal responsibility with Bill in taking charge of the younger boys.

Retorts With Sneer.

"Gramercy for the turnip greens," Dicky retorted, but there was no touch of lightness in his voice which would have redeemed the sneer.

I put my hands behind me so that he wouldn't see my clenched palms, and bolstered my determination not to give open expression to the anger which was consuming me.

"If you had been here, I would have consulted you first, of course, before speaking to Katherine," I went on, willing to give him that purely feminine little dig. "But you had said your coming home was exceedingly uncertain, and even if I could have reached you by telephone, it is hardly a subject we could discuss that way."

"I suppose you are going to say something after a while," my husband sneered, "but I warn you that I'm not going to wait for it much longer."

The last vestige of my self-control vanished.

Did Her Best.

"You needn't wait another second," I stormed. "I did what I thought best for Hank, and Katherine, the only adviser I had at hand, told me what she thought should be done. But, after all, it is entirely your affair. Hank is your nephew, not mine. If you wish to take the responsibility of sending him back to school without this examination, it is certainly your privilege. I shall not annoy you again except to insist that Hank never again is permitted to be with Junior and Roderick unless Bill or some older person is present."

I flashed past him and put my hand upon the key in the lock. I was so angry that at first I did not realize that the queer sound I heard behind me was a chuckle from Dicky. But the next instant, as he seized my hands and swung me around facing him, I saw that with one of the inexplicable and lightning-like changes of emotion which he occasionally exhibits, he had completely banished his anger and was smiling broadly instead.

"You are the prettiest thing when you get a righteous mad on!" he said, looking at me with an appraisal in his glance that made me flush in spite of the wrath which Dicky's change of front had not dispelled.

"But you're absolutely right, you know," he went on, with a sudden, sobering of his face and voice. "And I'm one of the Gadarene swine, the lean, hurry one on the left end, for acting this way. Come sweet! Look up and forgive your bad boy, and then tell me just what it is that Katherine and you want me to do about Hank."

HOROSCOPE

For Tuesday, June 14.

ACCORDING TO the lunar transits on this day, much may arise that may prove disturbing and aggravating. There are omens of contention, strife, enmity and vexation, if not downright bursts of passion, violence and consequent disaster. Safeguard all property, use prudence and forethought in all business relationships and be sure to keep a firm check on tongue and temper, lest loss and regret ensue.

If This Is Your Birthday.

Those whose birthday it is may not enjoy a year of "plain sailing" and happy situations unless they take particular care not to run counter to some circumstances which may incite to quarrels, passionate exhibitions or ungovernable violence.

A child born on this day may have an unruly if not ungovernable temper, being quick and ready to "fly off the handle". But it may be enterprising, hard working and constructive.

Exercise, Make-up For Eye Beauty

By JULIET SHELBY

(Central Press Writer on Beauty)

Let your eyes tell a story of youth and "joi de vivre." Then every glance will find its mark in a masculine heart. Bright, sparkling eyes will always beguile the boys, so make the most of your orbs.

There are three important things that will bring out the best in your eyes: daily care, a few makeup tricks and exercises.

Eye care which consists of the morning and nightly eye bath with a soothing lotion and the application of creams to keep away those telltale wrinkles, was discussed in detail in our column before. So we will go on to the other two items.

Here's how to make your eyes look demure under the new romantic hat veils. Use a natural eye makeup. Get one of the eyelash growers, that are also darkeners. They will encourage the growth of your lashes while beautifying them. Brush it through your eyebrows to give them luster and keep them in place. It will also darken them if they are too light. Use it as a mascara on your lashes and as a shadow on your eyelids.

If your eyes are deep-set, use face powder on your eyelids. Keep your eyeshadow high and near the brows.

For under-eye puffiness, use powder under your eyes and add a tiny touch of rouge there.

When the eyes are set too far apart, keep your eyeshadow close to your nose. If they are set too close together, start your eyeshadow in the middle of your eyelids and bring it out to the temples.

Exercises will do much to strengthen your eyes and keep away eye strain, with its squinting, frowning and redness. This one only takes a minute and is really most beneficial. Lie down, or sit comfortably in a chair. Follow a large imaginary circle on the wall. Let your eyes circle this imaginary disc slowly ten times. Keep your head still while doing the eye roll. Then open your eyes wide and count five, relax the muscles and count five. Do both of these movements five times. For the last of the routine, cup your hands, and keep your fingers tightly together so that no light will penetrate. Hold your cupped hands over your closed eyes for from three to five minutes. This is a wonderful short rest cure, so practice it often throughout the day.

No matter what your other good points may be, or what hidden charms you may possess—if your eyes look watery, weak and small—the gentlemen will never hang around long enough to discover that you have a heart of gold. So when you feel lazy don't neglect your eyes, unless you want to be neglected yourself.

Joan's perfectly miserable.

What can the victim of such self-consciousness do? Today, luckily, the causes and simple cures for inferiority complexes are well known. Anyone can learn to recognize his own brand of shyness, quickly root out the reasons for it.

Let these hints give you a head start. Offset your weak points with pleasing ones. Study yourself. Learn what styles become you best. Improve your appearance.

Practice an easy, friendly manner every day on salesclerks, next-door neighbors, your own family.

When you meet new people, hang on to your poise by asking yourself, "Do I like them?" not, "Do they like me?"

COUPLE MARRIED IN OPEN CHURCH SERVICE

Miss Luella Anetta Smith, Robert Allen White Exchange Vows In Double Ring Ceremony; Rev. Swoyer Officiates.

A DOUBLE RING ceremony performed yesterday at 2 p. m. in an open church service at the First Lutheran church by Rev. Grover E. Swoyer united in marriage Miss Luella Anetta Smith and Robert Allen White. Miss Smith is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Smith, 248 Wayne street, and Mr. White is the son of Ralph White, 415 Cline avenue.

The bride was clad in a blue lace gown with pink accessories and carried an arm boquet of pink and white rose buds. Her attendant, Miss Donna Freeman, wore a pink lace dress with white accessories. Her bouquet was of white rose buds and blue delphinium. Woodrow Cline was best man and Glenn Smith, brother of the bride, and Paul White, cousin of the bridegroom, served as ushers.

Numerous baskets and vases of cut flowers were used to decorate the altar and nuptial music was played by the organist, Mrs. Clayson Bell.

Mr. and Mrs. White are now on a short wedding trip through the east and will be at home on Second street about the middle of the week. Both are graduates of Mansfield Senior high school. Mr. White is employed at the Hartman Electric and Manufacturing company.

Out-of-town guests present for the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. P. F. Ungerer, Wooster; Mr. and Mrs. Claude Butdorf, Ashland; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hannan, Mt. Vernon; Mr. and Mrs. John Judson, Big Prairie; Mr. and Mrs. William Smith, Perrysville; Miss Florence Ungerer, Wooster; Miss Margaret Ackerman and Junior Clever, Lexington; Mrs. Russell Bride, Bellville; Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Ackerman and Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Ackerman, Lexington; Mrs. Thomas Thurst, Plymouth; Howard Long, Miss Esther Long, Harold Long, Miss Esther Peters and Miss Maxine Guthrie, all of Bellville, and William White of Wooster.

Miss Speas Offers Annual Student Recital at School

Seventy-five dance students of Marguerite Speas were presented in a musical-dance revue Friday night at Senior high school auditorium before an audience of approximately 1,000 persons.

The finished and colorful presentation was guided by the work of C. H. Saylor as master of ceremonies. Costumes were as attractive as any professional revue.

Five-year-old Joyce Payton did an acrobatic act that won her a big hand. All of the acts were warmly received, several standing out as they drew round after round of applause. Miss Martha Matcalf, a star pupil, gave three numbers, a cane dance, a toe and a toe tap.

One of the most unusual dances was done to the music of "Me Myself and I." Dorothy Sloan and Helen Moritz staged the dance as though one girl was dancing before a mirror, and the other girl with her back to the audience was the "reflection" in the mirror.

Other acts that were outstanding either because of ability, castumes or novelty effects were: the Sailors 'Spree, in which a sail boat came riding across the back of the stage carrying the dancers; Norma Scott in a roller skating and a tap dance; Patsy Frank in a hurdle acrobatic dance, and "Holland Time," in which the dancers, dressed as tulips, danced before an old Dutch windmill.

The Marguerite Speas pupils staged a revue last night at the Coliseum for the Ahepa convention, and will be presented again tonight at the Mansfield-Leland hotel ballroom for the same group.

By means of a simulated Associated Press bulletin, the engagement and approaching marriage of Miss Melva Graham was announced yesterday at a tea given by Miss Thelma Reec and Mrs. W. L. Creamy Foods Enhance Every Meal

By PAULINE SCHOFIELD
Home Service Department of the Ohio Fuel Gas Company.

Cream adds so much to so many foods—flavor, smoothness, nourishment, and also appearance where used decoratively. These are cream days—with fresh fruits and berries on the market; with salads that have a natural affinity for whipped cream; with summer desserts that simply "demand" cream Here are a few suggestions that should "win applause" from guests or family everytime.

Creamy Chicken Hash.

3 tablspoons butter
1 cup finely chopped celery
1 chicken bouillon cube
2½ tablespoons flour
½ cup milk
1 cup cream
2 cups diced cooked chicken
Salt and pepper
Shoestring potatoes

Melt the butter in a saucepan, and add celery. Cover and cook over low heat for about 10 minutes, stirring frequently. Add bouillon cube and flour and mix well. Add the milk and cream gradually and cook, stirring constantly until thickened. Add the chicken and the salt and pepper to taste. Serve on shoestring potatoes or on toast. Serves four to six.

Cream of Mushroom Soup.

3½ tablespoons butter
1½ cups finely chopped mushrooms (about ½ lb)
2 chicken bouillon cubes
4 tablespoons flour
3¾ cups water
1 cup cream
Salt and pepper

Melt the butter in the top of a double boiler placed directly over the heat. Add the mushrooms and cook over low heat for about 4 minutes or until soft, stirring frequently. Place over hot water, add the bouillon cubes and flour and mix well. Add the water gradually and cook, stirring constantly until thickened. Add the cream and salt and pepper to taste. Reheat. Serves six.

Pineapple Chartreuse

1 No. 2 can sliced pineapple
9 maraschino cherries
1 cup hot water
1 package lemon flavored gelatine
1 cup cold water
½ tablespoon plain gelatine
2 tablespoons cold water
2 tablespoons sugar
¾ cup whipping cream

Drain the pineapple and place one slice in the bottom of a medium sized bowl (1¼ quart capacity). Line the sides of the bowl with 5 slices of pineapple and garnish with 6 halves of maraschino cherries. Place a smaller bowl (about 2½ cup capacity) in the center of the larger bowl and weigh it down with something heavy. Pour the hot water over the lemon flavored gelatine and stir until dissolved. Add the 1 cup cold water and pour between the two bowls. When firm remove the smaller bowl by filling with lukewarm water for about ½ minute or less. Sprinkle the plain gelatine over the 2 tablespoons of cold water, add ¾ cup of hot pineapple juice and the sugar and stir until the gelatine is dissolved. Add the remaining pineapple, diced, and the remaining maraschino cherries sliced. When mixture begins to congeal fold in the whipped cream. Pour into the center of the mold. When firm unmold on serving dish. Serves six.

Strawberry Cream Dessert.

1 pint strawberries
½ to ¾ cup powdered sugar
1½ teaspoons gelatine
2 tablespoons water
Few grains salt
¾ cup whipping cream

Cut strawberries in thin slices, add sugar and mix well. Sprinkle the gelatine over the cold water and dissolve over hot water. Add the gelatine and salt to the strawberries, mix well and let cool until the mixture begins to congeal. Fold in the whipped cream. Chill. If desired, when serving garnish with additional whipped cream and whole strawberries with the hulls left on. Serves six.

Chocolate Cream Pie.

2¾ cups milk
3 squares chocolate
6 tablespoons flour
1 cup sugar
½ teaspoon salt
1 egg
2 tablespoons butter
1¼ teaspoons vanilla
1 baked pie shell
1 cup whipping cream
1 cup confectioner's sugar

Heat the milk and chocolate in a double boiler. When the chocolate is melted beat with a rotary egg beater until the mixture is smooth. Mix the flour, sugar and salt and stir in the slightly beaten egg. Add a little of the hot milk and chocolate and mix well Beat this into the first mixture and cook, stirring constantly, for about 5 minutes Cook for 10 minutes longer stirring occasionally. Remove from the heat and stir in the butter and 1 teaspoon of the vanilla Cool slightly and pour into the pie shell. When ready to serve, whip the cream, add the remaining ¼ teaspoon of vanilla and the confectioner's sugar and spread over the top of the pie

Favorite Famous Foods From Pennsylvania Dutch Kitchen

(By the AP Feature Service)

LITITZ, Pa.—The Pennsylvania Dutch are known for their quaint customs and their odd traits, but they are famous for their fine cooking.

Schnitz un knepp ponhaus, sauer kraut un pork, shoo-fly pie—all are the creations of the German settlers who came to eastern Pennsylvania early in the 18th century.

The dishes are as substantial as the good farm women who prepare them for men folk whose appetities are whipped to fine edge by mighty labor in the fields.

Stick to the Ribs.

"They stick to the ribs, that's why they are so good" said Ellen Carper, who, with her sister Lizzie, was stirring up a batch of knepp.

The Carper sisters, whose lives have been spent within an 18-mile radius of this Lancaster county town, are Mennonites, the largest sect of the Pennsylvania Dutch.

As Ellen dropped the knepp into boiling ham and schnitz — dried apples—Lizzie set the table.

When a Pennsylvania Dutch farmer eats, he eats. For dinner there was schnitz un kneep, dandelion dressed with bacon and sweetened vinegar and topped with sliced hard-boiled eggs, raw fried potatoes, shoo-fly pie, smearcase-cottage cheese thinned with cream—apple butter, home-made bread, mixed dried fruit and coffee.

Grace Before Meal.

The meal is served in one course. The steaming dishes are placed on the table and the diners go to it.

But before the first dish is passed there is a prayer. "No one would think of touching the food until grace has been said," Ellen explained.

Often schnitz un knepp, or apples and buttons as it is sometimes called, provides the complete meal. The savory ham and schnitz and the tasty dumplings cooked in the slightly sweetened broth is a mouth-watering dish to any hungry man.

Flavor Hints

Add grated cheese and minced onions to creamed eggs. Serve mayonnaise as a sauce on hot vegetables. Sprinkle a bit of nutmeg over sauce used with hot cauliflower.

Clean the piano keys by rubbing them with alcohol applied on a soft cloth.

Canape Scoop

Here's a canape that may be eaten easily with the fingers: Scoop out the centers of tiny rolls—about three inches long. When you're ready to serve them, spread the hollow sections with butter and stuff them with a highly seasoned ham relish.

Do cut-worms wreak havoc in your garden? Try this: Moisten a quart of bran with a cup of cold water. Add a teaspoon each of molasses and Paris green. Sprinkle some of the mixture around the plants just before dark. When you store the surplus, be sure to mark "Poison" on the container and keep it out of reach of the children.

CHAPTER XXVII

"Don't worry," he assured her 'That may sound crazy, but I never was more serious in my life Larry knows I love her. I've known it from the first day I saw her, but I never told her until that day....when my uncle let her go. Of course she couldn't believe me, so I told her the next day, too. I intended to tell her as often as I could, until she would believe it. But she wrote me a note saying that she didn't care to see me again. Did she tell you?"

"Yes," Mrs. Layne admitted feebly. "I knew."

'And of course you're thinking I must be some sort of a...well, ill-bread to say the least, to be here now. The reason is that I have just found out why Larry wrote that note. It seems to me that all I've been doing is saying, 'I didn't know.' But I didn't discover that my uncle, Mr. Wardlaw, had come here to see Larry until this morning You don't need to tell me, but I know what he wanted. That's why Larry wrote to me. She must have thought I was a beautiful cad! I'm right about that, am I not?"

'Why, he didn't see Larry " her mother admitted reluctantly 'He talked to Muriel. But...you're right "

I knew it.' Clay admitted with a sigh. "Please let me tell you what happened...everything "

He gave the whole miserable account, omitting none of its details so far as he knew them.

'I'm not here to apologize for my uncle," he concluded "Much less to explain him I don't think he had the slightest personal grievance against Larry or against your family It must have been some sort of an obsession that he didn't want me to have any interests outside that mill... that and some crazy notion that he owned me because he had paid for my education. I don't know."

It's quite clear to me Mrs. Layne told him with unexpected astuteness Jealousy. That's all it is. I think Mrs. Kime was quite correct in what she told you. Mr Wardlaw was very much in love with your mother I can see no reason you should have been [illegible] I had a terrible time [illegible] I think he always held it against you and, when you came, he couldn't bear the idea of sharing you with anyone '

That may be it, Clay granted 'Just the same I was a fool not to have had my eyes opened sooner and taken things into my own hands I should have come here and made Larry hear the truth ....Maybe she'll listen to you

'I don't know Larry seems different from my other children I've never found it easy to understand her

'Mrs Layne do you think that someone else has a claim on her affections? Young Grant, for instance?'

I don't know Walter's very fond of Larry and he's a nice boy I have rather hoped that Larry could like him You see, I'm old-fashioned that way. I believe in girls marrying early and settling down My Muriel had a very unhappy experience...'

I understand so Clay interposed

'Well, that has been just one more reason that I have wanted to see Larry happy I believe that she would have the same intense devotion to any man she loved.."

'So do I." Clay agreed warmly. 'And I've a notion that I'm the man who should have it, too. You wouldn't have any personal objection to me, would you, Mrs. Layne? Even if I do have to call Mr. Wardlaw a relative out of courtesy? It wasn't my fault after all. So far as I know, I'm perfectly respectable "

"Why, yes...I'm sure you are," Mrs Layne admitted in some confusion.

"All right That's one thing out of the way What's your guess, about my chances? Do you think Larry does or ever could care a little about me"

"She's the only one who can tell you that, Mr. Yodel."

"No guesses?"

"Well...I'm not so sure she doesn't. Larry's been different since she knew you. My girls both tell me I'm too romantic for an old woman, but a mother can see some things. Larry has been pretty upset over losing her job at the mill She's tried to make me think that was the only thing that worried her, but....she's been unhappy about something else. I can't explain it. But if you really do love her...I'd ask her about it. This may make a difference "

"You mean, then, that she did think I let Mr. Wardlaw come here?"

"Well, he let Muriel think so I know that."

Clay beamed upon his hostess. 'You know, Mrs. Layne, one of the main reasons I want to marry Larry is so I can have you for a mother I don't remember having one of my own. I'm counting on you to help me. Between us, we've got to see that Larry understands If she throws me out, or tries to, I'm going to put up a fight Will you help?"

'I might "

"Mrs Layne, I'm scared I've simply got to see Larry and do my best to make her understand, but I know that she isn't going to like the idea very well I don't want to be rough I wish you'd tell me how you think I ought to go about it. If I came here this evening, do you think you could arrange matters so I would be sure of a chance to talk to her? If I can only get a good start, I hope I can carry on. Would it do any good do you think, if you were to tell her I was here? Tell her that I'm coming back later and that she owes it to me to listen to what I have to say?"

'I don't know....She just might decide to leave the house If she did I wouldn't be able to stop her you know '

I couldn't very well hide in a closet, or anything like that, I suppose."

Mrs Layne pursed her soft lips thoughtfully.

'I shouldn't really do it, I'm sure," was her conclusion. 'But I think I will. The girls should be home before long I'll ask you to stay to supper Larry can't very well go out if we have a guest, I should think After that, it will be up to you I'll promise to keep Muriel out of the way, Griff is working "

"That's mighty sweet of you," Clay declared "I'll do it I suppose there isn't anything I could do to help while we're waiting... any errands or anything?"

"Oh, no It will be a cold supper. But, if I were you, I think I would move my car away from out front."

"Lord! I never thought of that. Thanks!"

Clayton Odell drew a long breath when Mrs Layne, from her observation post at the window, announced that her two daughters had returned

Larry and Muriel were laughing and talking as they came up the porch steps, Larry leading the way and tugging off her hat as she crossed the door.

"Back safe and sound?" was her mother's greeting, accompanied by a warning gesture of a finger laid to her lips "We have company for supper," she cautioned in lowered tones At the same time, she closed the front door quickly behind Muriel and paused with her ample back against it, as if to make sure that her younger daughter would not attempt to stage a flight She listened somewhat fearfully.

'Oh . . ." It had an almost strangled sound Then Clay's bland tones

The responses were subdued but polite Then Larry was in the hall, calling back a gracious, "Excuse me a minute, please," over her shoulder She caught her mother by the arm and fairly dragged her to the kitchen, thrust her within and closed the door before she burst out wildly.

"Mums! How could you! How could you! You know . . " A sob caught her throat Tears of helpless anger filled her eyes

Mrs Layne met the charge with unlooked-for composure A resentful attitude she decided instinctively, would be best in this situation

'See here young lady," she countered "I don't know of any good reason why I can't entertain guests here without asking your leave . . even if you do seem to think you're grown up I couldn't very well do anything but ask Mr. Yodel to stay until you girls came home '

'Oh but Mums!" Larry groaned

'But nothing! He's our guest and you're going to treat him that way I know what I'm talking about Now you walk right in and entertain him Tell Muriel I want her to help me with supper."

I I can't!"

"And I could spank you! Come on now Do it for your mother. I don't often ask you for anything, do I?"

Larry's answer was to move to the mirror and glance at her hair. She took her comb and lipstick from her bag and made swift repairs

'All right," she said gruffly. 'But I'll never forgive you"

'Oh, yes you will. 'Trot along Send Muriel out"

Muriel seemed relieved to have the message and left the living-room with incoherent excuses Clay still was on his feet

"Won't you sit down?" he urged Larry unsmilingly.

"I suppose so,' she returned coldly. "But don't you think you're being rather contemptible? I do."

'I had to expect that," he replied gravely "But I had to come, in spite of it You see, Larry, something has happened It's something that I have to tell you about or I'll never have any peace of mind After you hear it, then it's up to you If you're finished with me then for good and all, you needn't worry that I'll ever trouble you again "

"And of course we must take care of your peace of mind," Larry suggested flatly.

"All right, Miss Larry. If you're going to be tough about it, so am I. When I found you weren't home, your mother was good enough to hear what I had to say. Oh, yes . . . I told her that I was in love with you. She was kind. It won't hurt you to listen."

"It seems I have no choice "

Larry felt an odd little stir in her heart Not for worlds would she have admitted a slight admiration for Clay's attitude, or that the tenseness of his firm jaw made him even more handsome than usual.
